COUNCIL BACKTRACKS ON SIDEWALK BISTROS

By PAUL MOSS

Sidewalk cafeterias will be allowed on the Government Street Mall after all, Victoria city council indicated Tuesday.

But before individual applications are considered the city will develop an overall policy to regulate this type of activity.

Tuesday's brief discussion by council in caucus appeared to be a complete reversal of opinion on the part of several aldermen, members of the roads committee who last week recommended rejection of a restaurant's request to serve refreshments at outdoor tables on the mall.

At that time most committee members felt that granting the application would set an unfortunate precedent for other mall-fronting businesses to extend their trade on to the sidewalk, resulting in a cluttered-up appearance.

Nothing was said about the particular request from Brand's Restaurant, 1009 Government, being unsuitable, or about establishing a general policy. The recommendation was for straight rejection, period.

But on Tuesday Ald. Bob Ellis reopened discussion by saying he believed Brand's proposal was turned down "not on principle," but because of the individual circumstances.

"I have had a number of representations made to me that sidewalk cafes would be a good idea, and I would like to see a formalized policy on this," he said.

Ald. Alf Hood, one of the most outspoken opponents of the plan last week, said Ald. Bob Wright was in the process of drawing up guidelines for various activities on the mall, including the aspect of outdoor restaurants.

Wright told council that in due course he would bring forward his recommendations, including "the type of thing Brand's want to have."

"We want to be sure our homework is done properly before we can be proud of what is going up in there, rather than end up with a hotch-potch," he added.

Wright said that in an informal luncheon discussion following last week's committee meeting, several aldermen agreed that "some activity on the mall was a good idea."

Until today, the Nanaimo area's 43 schools had been open for students to pick up and hand in assignments to teachers, although classes were cancelled.

Joy Leach, a spokesman for the 228 members of the school board local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the school pickets were posted this morning to protest the employer's "stalling tactics."

She said the local appreciated the "tremendous support" of the teachers.

The picket lines were respected by nearly all of the 660 teachers affected by the dispute.

A spokesman for Nanaimo District Teachers Association said only a few teachers had crossed picket lines this morning. Most of the rest attended "in-service sessions" at four designated meeting places.

They were to discuss their position and later today were expected to continue in groups to work on professional development.

The same procedure was likely to be taken again Thursday, the spokesman said.

James Thorpe, Nanaimo school board treasurer, said today no further negotiation meetings are scheduled although "management is ready and willing at any time."

He said negotiations are now in the mediation stage and the next meeting is at the call of mediator Clark Gilmour. It is not at the call of management, "something the union chooses to ignore," Thorpe said.

He said most schools were in a state of confusion because of the picket's appearance early this morning.

In Duncan, teachers have received permission from the IWA to cross picket lines and go to work on Friday.

Teachers are required to report for work even though the schools are closed until Friday. A board spokesman said the schools will be open for one hour on Friday.

The CUPE local in the Duncan area schools, representing clerical staff, is respecting the picket lines.

IWA president Roger Stanley said today no negotiations are scheduled.

The union is asking for an increase to $6.50 an hour on the minimum rate of $5.65 an hour. The board has offered $6.10 an hour.

The minister said people working on the ferries are paid a "fantastic" rate, averaging about $15,000 a year.

"Naturally management would prefer spending money on more workers instead of on overtime and fewer workers," Davis said.

Management and the union are meeting today in an attempt to work out what will happen to the 450 people when all the jobs are eliminated.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said he was aware of the impending layoffs but the issue was for discussion between union and management.

Ferry service general manager Charles Gallagher said Tuesday 450 jobs in the dining rooms of the ferry fleet will be eliminated in May or June when three new ferries join the service.

The ferry workers' component of the B.C. Government Employees Union have countered with an offer to buy the fleet for $1.

Top-Level Meet Slated Over Wilkinson Future

Attorney-General Gordon will meet Saanich police chief Bob Peterson and Dr. John Hogarth, chairman of the B.C. Police Commission, to discuss the fate of the Wilkinson Road prison.

The local (police) board, citizens in the area and council are concerned," Peterson told a press conference today. "It's also of great concern to the police commission of the province."

Peterson said Hogarth had informed him of the meeting with Gordon.

Mayor Ed Lum said government is "having a good look at the institution. A decision has to be made very quickly on what sort of an institution it is going to be."

Lum said no work had been done on the jail since the former NDP government decided it would be phased out.

Peterson said, in spite of the deplorable state of the prison, his department received great co-operation within their abilities from the Wilkinson Road staff.

He said he is against having an alarm sounded for prison breaks, as requested by some residents living near the prison.

He said sounding an alarm could panic an escapee and also could create overall unrest among the prisoners.

"A low profile is probably a lot better than dealing with it on a high key," Peterson said.

Peterson said his department's shift to the 12-hour patrol system Dec. 1 has not resulted in fatigue as he had originally suspected. The new system, he added, also appears to have cut overtime expenses.

He said the federal solicitor-general's department, at Peterson's request, has ordered a study to assess the effect and benefits to the policemen, their families and the general community.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin visited Jewish settlers in the occupied territory Tuesday and promised that they will be there a long time, despite Arab protests.

Rabin visited some of the 16 Jewish communities at strategic points along the Jordan and said none would be given up.

"I see the Jordan as a border vital for Israel's security," Rabin said. "The government set up and is setting up these settlements and it plans to keep them here for a long time."

Curfew Clamping West Bank Arabs

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — Israeli troops clamped a curfew on the Arab town of Tulkarm today for the second day in a row as another protest flared against Israel's occupation of Jordan's West Bank.

Major Haim Hannan predicted the protests will continue as long as Israel keeps its troops on the West Bank and builds Jewish settlements on occupied Arab land.

The curfew was ordered after Arab soldiers scuffled with soldiers and ordered merchants to close their shops for a business strike.

Most of the West Bank was quiet after a day of scattered anti-Israeli riots. "There are many soldiers but very few people in the streets," said a doctor in Nablus, a centre of recent violence. "The people are afraid to go out."

"Yesterday the soldiers welded shut the doors of some striking shops and painted them with red crosses," Dr. Jamal Hayat, a member of the Nablus town council, said in a telephone interview.

"In the last three days I

Woman, 83, Beaten

VANCOUVER (CP) — Michael Small, 19, of Vancouver was committed for trial Tuesday on charges of breaking and entering and of assaulting an 83-year-old woman.

He was charged with breaking into the woman's apartment July 6 and breaking her left leg. The woman testified that a man came into the apartment about 5 a.m. through a screened bedroom window.

He grabbed her by the arm, knocked her down, "then he sat on me. He dragged me by the arm to the hallway and sat on my left leg which he broke," the woman testified.

Marchand was Quebec lieutenant in the federal cabinet in 1972 and Don Jamieson was transport minister.

RCMP examined documents from their files during an investigation by the commercial crime branch that began more than a year ago.

RCMP turned over the files in the case to Montreal prosecutor Joseph Tarasofsky in March, a fact that raised immediate questions Tuesday about why the charges were placed in Ontario rather than Quebec.

Tarasofsky declined comment but RCMP Insp. John Bentham said in a prepared statement:

"Since the criminal allegations involved locations in both the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, the attorney-general's departments of each province were consulted and consistent with the facts of the matter, a decision was made to proceed with the charges in Ontario."

Mearwhile, Elmer MacKay, the Progressive Conservative MP who first raised the matter of Sky Shops in the House of Commons, said he was glad to hear that charges have been laid in connection with the matter.

MacKay, however, reiterated his call for a full judicial inquiry into "how government deals with its friends."

"The matter is before the courts and I don't want to prejudice what's going to happen," he said in an interview from his home in Lorne, N.S.

PRINCESS ANNE TOSSSED FROM HORSE

BLANDFORD, England (AP) — Princess Anne's horse fell on her during a riding competition today, briefly knocking her unconscious. She was taken to a hospital, where a preliminary examination showed she suffered a concussion but no broken bones, officials said.

Princess Anne, one of Britain's hopes for an equestrian gold medal at the Montreal Olympics this summer, was riding Candlewick in the Portman horse trials near Blandford when the accident occurred.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said Anne and the horse fell at the second to last fence of the course and she was unconscious for only a few moments.

Witnesses said Princess Anne's husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, also riding in the event, went to her aid and was with her when she regained consciousness.

An ambulance attended and rushed on to the track and covered her with blankets until an ambulance arrived to take her to the hospital at nearby Poole.

The Queen was celebrating her 50th birthday at Windsor Castle and was not present at the trials. The 25-year-old princess is fourth in line of succession to the throne.

Terror Bombers Face Big Blow

The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — What could be the biggest long-term blow to the Provisional Irish Republican Army's bombing campaign, both in England and Northern Ireland, is to fall within the next three weeks.

From then on, according to the manufacturers of the gelignite which has been used exclusively by the Provos, it will be impossible to pass the explosive to them without its origin being traced if it is recovered.

Security forces are hoping that the new system, which the manufacturing company claims is the most advanced in the world, will virtually dry up the Provos' supplies overnight.

Up to now the Provisionals have always used Frangex gelignite, manufactured by the Irish Industrial Explosives Co. in Enfield, in the Irish Republic. The latest example was found last week when 200 pounds of Frangex, in good condition, was discovered in a garage in London.

It is accepted that the Provisional's gelignite is not stolen — extremely difficult both in Ireland and England — but is passed to them by sympathizers in legitimate outlets, who are able to order large amounts for use in such operations as quarrying. They hold back the comparatively small amounts that terrorists need for their bombings.

The lack of success of the Irish authorities in stemming these leaks has caused mounting pressure from the British government. The answer is now being installed at the factory.

An elaborate coding system will enable each stick of gelignite to be traced to the person it was sold to, together with the date on which it was supplied. Up to now color coding in the Irish Republic has only enabled the authorities to trace the source to one of three different areas.

Sean O'Sullivan, the managing director of IIE, said Tuesday that the new system would be "virtually foolproof. It will be impossible to obscure the origin of the gelignite without destroying it totally," he said.

The only snag in the operation is that gelignite kept in ideal conditions has a shelf life of two to three years. With the company manufacturing 6,000 tons a year, the comparatively small amounts needed by the terrorists could be accumulated before the new system comes into operation.

Canadian Satellite On Stream

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's new $60-million super-satellite reached full power output shortly after midnight as space scientists in Canada and the United States prepared to begin two years of advance communications technology experiments.

Controllers at the communications department space centre here said complex technical experiments by the department's communications research centre will begin Thursday.

The racing came to an abrupt halt after two cars collided at an intersection.

Both cars were heavily damaged, but injuries were minor.

The satellite, the most powerful ever built, was constructed in Canada but launched by the U.S. National Aeronautic and Space Administration in Florida last January.

The solar-powered satellite, in stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the earth, is capable of relaying television, radio, telephone and other electronic signals and from small portable ground stations in remote areas.

Police Strike: Teens Dragging

Times News Services

FREDERICTON — Downtown Queen Street became a full-fledged drag strip Tuesday night, with traffic lights used to signal the start of races and a crowd estimated at up to 1,000 on hand.

"They're changing their racing tires on the main street," one member of Fredericton's striking 77-member police force said.

Meanwhile, no strike date had been set by the 117-member Moncton police force which voted 114-2 Tuesday to go on strike.

Moncton was twice the population of Fredericton.

At issue in both cities is money.

The police want parity with $15,300-a-year rates paid to first-class constables in Saint John, compared with about $11,000 paid here and in Moncton.

Powerless Parliament

When a federal politician is stuck for issues he can always hark back to the erosion of parliament's prerogatives. It's a favorite with Conservatives stretching from John Diefenbaker to Joe Clark, the latest person to say in stentorian tones that we have abandoned the system of responsible government.

Casting his personal sticks on the ever-smoldering fire, the Conservative leader says parliamentary committees should be given independent powers to initiate investigations of their own, borrowing from the American system.

This axe has been ground verbally so often, it is difficult to ascertain whether the grinder is proposing serious reform or simply whetting his mouth. But Clark has a point, despite his lack of power to effect needed changes. The arrogance of orders-in-council or cabinet decisions without the benefit of legislative scrutiny is a hallmark of Canadian governments. Perhaps the most famous order-in-council of recent years swept away our civil rights at four a.m. on an October morning in 1970. Something was mumbled about an "apprehended insurrection" at the time and parliament went along by giving the government decision a large majority, after the fact, as it were. This dead dog act over the War Measures Act is enough to cast doubt on fresh finger wagging from the opposition.

Clark's fulminations are of course concerned with the prime minister's penchant for quiet talks with RCMP commissioners whenever his ministers are approached by the police. The prime minister emerges from these meetings and assures us that the universe is unfolding as it should. Ever discreet RCMP commissioners say nothing. The public is left in a quandary as the mini-scandals involving the Sky Shops affair and janitorial services simmer somewhere out of public view. Clark is quite right to raise the issue again, though. The trouble is he will get little support from government benches. Independent parliamentary committees that would investigate these and other issues could certainly give the public a better chance to find out what is going on in its government.

An entrenched administration where civil servants are on record as being opposed to a proposed freedom of information act, where no conflict of interest rules regulate mandarins, where senators hold seats of corporate directorships and debate laws directly affecting those interests, is not the place to hope for reforms.

We shall simply have to wait for Joe Clark's election. Then will be time enough to see if he makes good on his opposition concerns. Meanwhile, the universe will unfold as the Trudeau administration sees fit.

Vegetable, Animal or . . .

The pace at which artificial foods are being invented is accelerating. For much of this century, margarine was about the only thing people ate that wasn't produced by something that moved or grew. Then came fake orange juice about 15 years ago which American astronauts popularized. Today there are chocolate bars with no chocolate, whipped cream made from petroleum and egg stand-ins that heard nary a henhouse cackle to go with the bacon and sausages that consist of textured and flavored soya bean threads.

Now the Russians report manufacturing artificial caviar "which tastes just like the real thing," according to news reports. You bet. It's made from milk by-products, fish fats, oils, salt and water. Just dandy with scrambled sham eggs and phony melba toast.

All it requires is an artificial champagne made from tap water and powdered additives just like a better-known drink for children.

To coin an old Russian curse, may your grandmother be marooned on a desert island with nothing but a case of yak margarine and melba toast made from recycled newspapers.

Save the Marguerite (II)

Was it only a year ago the community was in a dither over the CPR's announcement that it was going to scrap the Princess Marguerite? Was it only a year ago that this newspaper wrote an editorial with the same headline as above?

We thought the Marguerite's usefulness to Victoria's economy was demonstrated beyond doubt. Both the former and present provincial governments had promised to keep her running. The controversy over whether she actually makes or loses money should be laid to rest. Would there be several groups waiting with cheque books in hand to purchase a money-losing boat?

Someone, please, save the Marguerite. Again.

No Clark-o-mania With Joe

OTTAWA — The difference between Joe Clark and most political leaders that's the easiest to spot is his youth. He's 36, going on 37. A too-large head on a too-long neck accentuates his appearance of boyish vulnerability. So does a chin that doesn't jut out far enough, with a cleft that isn't deep enough to give him that reassuring leader-when-his-hands-are-his look.

During a two-day swing through the Atlantic provinces, Clark showed also that he is different in at least two other ways with more substance to them that Canadians are going to become familiar with as he carries out his plan to go into the country, away from Ottawa and the House of Commons, for about three days of every week.

Clark creates no space around himself. Nor does he want to. "I want to stay in touch with High River," he told me in an interview, referring to the small, slow and quite beautiful Alberta town where he grew up. He knows nothing, or as little as do most Canadians, about wines and gourmet food, and hasn't the slightest interest in learning about them. He wears suits now instead of a sports jacket, but with belts and in creative colour combinations, like a bright red tie with a navy blue suit.

Not a Swinger

As one way to stay in touch, Clark plans to develop, much as did U.S. President Franklin Roosevelt, a network of individuals outside of politics who he can call and can assemble, perhaps a half dozen times a year, for a day's brainstorming about public opinion and issues.

On a public platform Clark can come across as 36 going on 66. His speeches are freighted with leaden phrases like, "we must decide how to utilize the levers of monetary and fiscal policy at the macro level." He emphasizes points with a stiff-palmed karate chop of his left hand.

Away from the spotlight, Clark shines. He has a quick, easy wit at his own expense. After the leadership convention, he comments, the Toronto Star ran a banner headline: "Joe Who?" If people still don't know his name, says Clark, "I'll be glad to be known as Mr. Maureen McTeer."

He is open. People sense it, and open up to him. In St. John's airport, a group of Quebec students spot him. "On dit qu'il parle français," one says to his friends. As Clark walks by they go up to him, tentatively begin in French, and when he responds, chat delightedly.

Clark's second outstanding quality is an extraordinary understanding of the political process and of the nature of government which, to match in someone who has only just become opposition leader, you might have to go all the way back to Mackenzie King.

He plans to "wind down" Petro-Canada, the government's new energy corporation, for example. It's his reason for this policy that is revealing.

"There will never be a Clark-o-mania," he says. "Some of the aura comes from the office, but that I lack personal magnetism is a reality I accept. Therefore I will have to build upon a team."

But isn't this, because of television, the age of the leader?

"That's the conventional wisdom, and in part it's true. But we're going to win the election by regions and by sectors, and for that you need a team of people who can to some degree stand on their own."

To develop that team Clark has moved carefully since his victory to build upon the greatest single accomplishment of the Conservative leadership convention, which was to have created the appearance, and to a considerable degree the substance, of a unified party.

Openness, Pragmatism

Clark's shuffle of his "shadow cabinet" was less dramatic than some expected from a new leader. Yet he neatly promoted the careers of two leadership rivals who might otherwise have grown restive — Quebecer Claude Wagner and fellow Albertan Jack Horner. After the Easter break, Clark will complete the renewal process by shifting half a dozen veterans from the front-bench to the back rows.

Clark raises no great expectations from his audiences. His pitch instead is openness and a pragmatic understanding of how our political system really works. That formula may just match exactly the mood of a public that itself no longer has great expectations about what government can do.

The formula has been used twice recently, and it has succeeded twice. It brought victory to Socred Bill Bennett in another example about an election platform. Instead, he intends to work on "specific programs, and people to carry them out, when we take office." His reasoning is that "governments that aren't prepared for office quickly become captives of the bureaucracy."

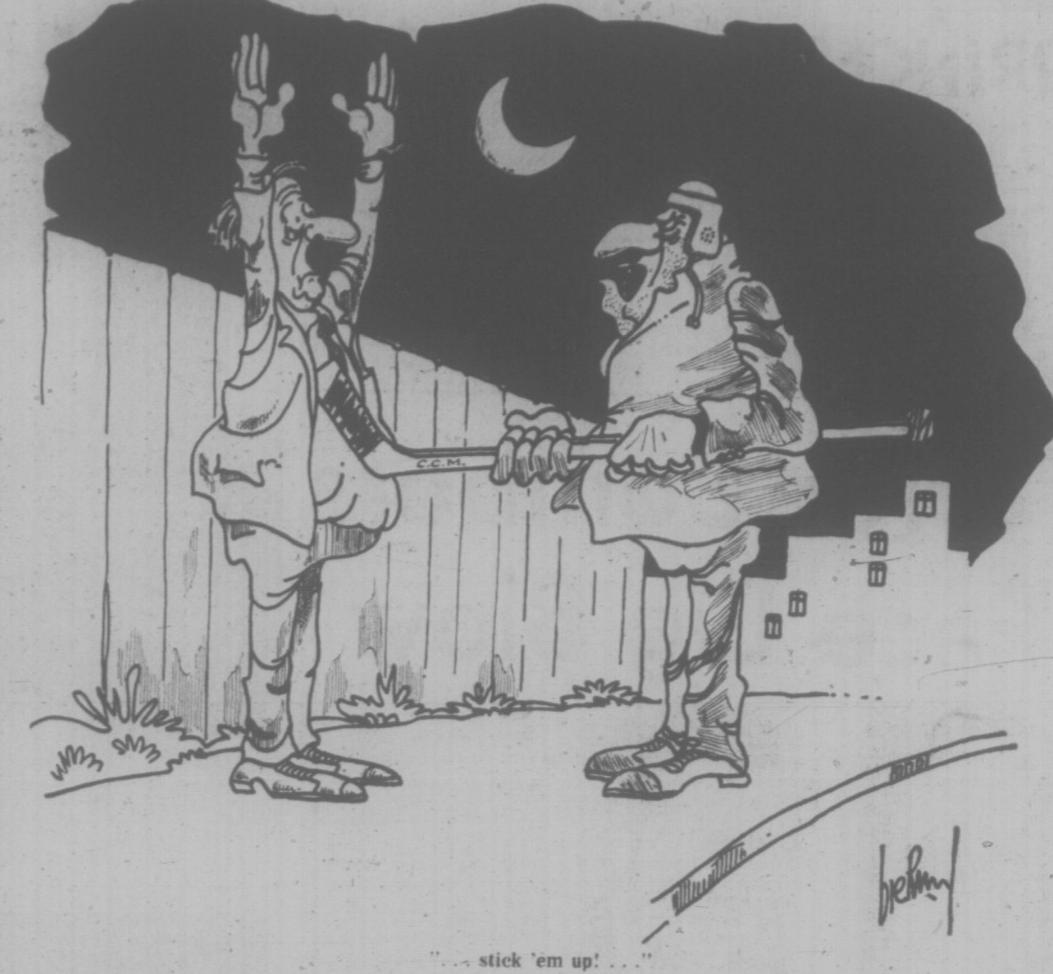

"When you have a crown corporation competing with private companies the government is likely to bias its regulation of that industry in favour of its own creation."

Clark is not particularly worried in another example about an election platform. Instead, he intends to work on "specific programs, and people to carry them out, when we take office." His reasoning is that "governments that aren't prepared for office quickly become captives of the bureaucracy."

Clark is open. People sense it, and open up to him. In St. John's airport, a group of Quebec students spot him. "On dit qu'il parle français," one says to his friends. As

Clarification

As a member of the Alma Mater Society and spokesman for the students here at the University of Victoria, I have been requested to make a public written retraction of some misstatements that appeared in an article Student Fed Vote Challenge dated April 1. First of all, I can't possibly see how I can retract something I didn't say or wasn't quoted as saying, nor was your newspaper or reporter at fault, but I would like to clarify this issue for those that feel it is necessary.

The article was basically about the results of a referendum run March 23, asking students if they were in favor of joining BCSF (British Columbia Students' Federation) and being assessed a $1 fee each for that purpose. The article went on to say that I felt some displeasure at the outcome in view of various facts. I have outlined some of them very briefly below:

- 1) That over $40 of student money was spent in promoting joining BCSF and nothing was spent on pointing out the pitfalls of such an organization and the real failures of past ones.

- 2) That a similar referendum failed under the guidelines of the University of B.C. AMS constitution a week prior to our referendum, and yet this information was not publicly divulged to the UVic students so that they could vote more wisely on the issue.

- 3) That less than 10 per cent of UVic students voted.

- 4) That only 52.5 per cent of those 10 per cent who voted, were in favor of joining.

If the BCSF is supposed to represent all post-secondary students and the largest population of 23,000 of UBC isn't going to join, how can it be representative?

I would at this point like to remind everyone that a referendum is more of a public opinion poll and not a binding resolution. Certainly half of 10 per cent cannot be looked upon as a mandate to join the BCSF. In fact, to this moment a petition is being circulated around the university to ask council to reconsider the results and that the issue of joining is put to the students again in September and that it be more properly handled.

The retraction, if needed at all, is in regards to the statement: "A $400 budget was earmarked, for advertising the referendum." The fact is that $400 was earmarked for the BCSF, (to send delegates to conferences, inform students of BCSF activities, buy their newspapers). There is still money left in that account, so perhaps, another referendum may be forthcoming.

In any event, let me apologize to those offended and misled. I hope I haven't made an issue out of all this confusion or vice versa. — J. Alistair Palmer, President Alma Mater Society, University of Victoria.

Vets Mistreated

I am writing this in protest of the treatment some of the veterans are getting in the ex-memorial hospital for veterans which was taken over by Royal Jubilee Hospital last year.

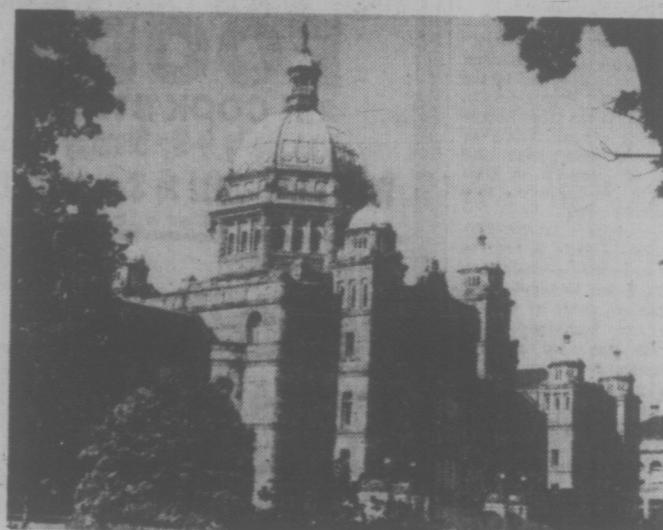

I was wandering through the ward yesterday morning while waiting to get treatment at the out-patient section.

I heard a patient call urgently for a bed pan four times and in the end had to go in the bed.

Now, why is it that the hospital is cutting down on staff so much that the poor veterans have to suffer? It is not the staff's fault, as they can not look after everybody at once. It's just that there are not enough staff.

What's wrong? Is the provincial government hard up? Where is the $180 million it got back from ICBC?

After those veterans lost their health to protect Canada, is that all the thanks they get? — Another Disgruntled Vet.

Cabinet Secretaries

The Vancouver East by-election, we will soon be able to lay democracy to rest in B.C.

I would point out to all these geniuses that despite his loss, Dave Barrett polled more votes in the December election than any other candidate except four — Messrs. Davidson, McClelland, Kerster and Nielsen.

Barrett collected about 18,000 votes and lost his seat. Consider the heroic feat of the "Little Chief" Frank Calder who swept back into his seat with about 900 votes, or roughly five per cent of the votes Barrett polled in losing.

To all you who have the feeling that the "will of the public" has been defied, and want a worthy cause to champion, the word is redistribution.

Social Credit received about 50 per cent of the vote and have over a 2-1 majority in the legislature while the NDP garnered roughly 40 per cent for about 30 per cent of the seats.

I am not crying about the Socred victory. After all the NDP slipped in 1972 on 39 per cent of the vote.

We do not require a return to the single transferrable vote that allowed Social Credit to assume power in 1952 but we badly need redistribution to fetch a semblance of democracy to this province.

Who knows? Someday we may elect a truly majority government — K. G. Uisale, Burnaby, B.C.

Credibility

Surely those who watch the day by day deterioration of B.C. under the new Socred government will be brought up short by the latest gimmick with ICBC's $181 million!

People with any astuteness could see that all these Socred election figures were just so much political hogwash and now the proof of this is down in black and white before us.

Like all the other nonsense in the name of "business administration" their ICBC figures turn out to have been a flat-faced lie like almost all the promises and figures conjured up to scare the people into putting B.C. back into the promoters and rip-off artists hands!

Hopefully even diehard Socreds can read figures. Praise God, NEVER AGAIN! — P. Simpson, 2536 Forbes Street.

Russians Rip Off State for Billions of Rubles

MOSCOW — In the Caucasian republic of Azerbaijan, a ring of 64 farm and canning factory employees swindled the government out of nine million rubles — ($12 million) by selling it nonexistent vegetables.

In the Baltic republic of Lithuania, over $1 million worth of fashionable fabric was diverted from a textile factory for bootleg resale in Georgia, 1,800 miles away. The investigation of the crime extended to six Soviet cities.

In a Russian city, truck drivers qualified for bonuses by reporting that they had removed two million tons of snow, a quantity that could have fallen only over 20 years.

These cases, reported in the press over recent months, are all part of the Soviet Union's most persistent crime problem. Overall statistics are kept secret, but some Russians believe the economic cheating of the Soviet state by its citizens may run into billions of rubles a year.

At the party congress last month, Leonid Brezhnev underscored the Kremlin's concern by calling for updated economic legislation that would in part "be more effective in countering cases of defrauding the state, doctoring of accounts, theft of socialist property" and similar offences.

Moscow has been hampered from waging a more open campaign because crime, by Soviet definition, is supposed to be a capitalist phenomenon. There is less violent crime in the Soviet Union than in the West, and the majority of it can be traced to drunkenness, yet economic crime seems to flourish.

There are stories about workers who pocket factory goods for resale outside, farmers who cart home state grain to feed their personal livestock, and bus drivers who carry ticketless passengers for a price. Sometimes the corruption surfaces in high places. Muscovites still recall how the late minister of culture, Yekaterina A. Furtseva, was reprimanded two years ago for having built a $170,000 dacha with state materials.

Tracking down such violators is the full-time job of the O.B. Kh.S.S., or Division for the Struggle against Embezzlement of State

By CHRISTOPHER S. WREN

Property, a branch of the police. Major crimes, including those involving foreign currency or precious metals, are handled by a unit of the KGB, or state security apparatus.

The Soviet Union is probably the only industrialized country that imposes a death penalty for serious economic crimes. Prison sentences ranging up to 15 years — the maximum jail term — are imposed for lesser offences.

The penalties are severe but people still take risks because the opportunities are there," said one woman.

The problem is widespread in part because the Soviet government defines as economic crimes some activities that would be quite legal in the West. Private enterprise and middleman activity are lumped as punishable offences along with poaching, forgery and moonshining.

Some Russians contend that state ownership of all production makes pilfering more socially tolerated.

The cumbersome bureaucracy is also vulnerable to embezzlement. A legal study published here last summer reported "widespread" fraud in the Russian Federation, particularly in construction and agriculture. In the Buryat Autonomous Republic alone, report-padding to earn production bonuses in the first half of 1974 jumped four times over that of the previous year.

A year ago, Boris Viktorov, Deputy Minister of Internal Affairs, proposed closing some loopholes that facilitated economic crimes. State allowances for loss or damage were pegged too high, he noted in the newspaper Ekonomiceskaya Gazeta, letting employees skim off the difference undetected. A survey of Moscow refrigerated storerooms found 4.5 tons of poultry and 35 tons of cheese about to be needlessly written off as spoilage.

A variation in standards and prices for some consumer goods enables dishonest managers to substitute inferior products at higher prices, Viktorov noted.

Embezzlement has gone undetected because of a shortage of trained auditors, the deputy minister said. In the Central Asian republic of Kirghizia, a gang operated in one plant for four years. When they had already stolen 12,000 rubles ($16,000), an internal audit turned up only an overpayment of 3 rubles in wages.

But stealing is also reported outside the factory. A letter in Pravda last fall from the industrial city of Penza told of extensive theft of radios, batteries and other parts from new cars being transported by rail, though armed guards ride such trains.

In the service sector, one of the riper targets has been the state gasoline stations. It was disclosed last August that daily gasoline sales in Azerbaijan had officially dwindled to less than a half-pint per car though the numbers of cars kept growing. The rest was hustled on the side.

Some Liberal Friends Get Around Guidelines

By DOUG COLLINS

everyone get together for a meeting. (Jack, as is well known, would like to be prime minister, but can't afford to take the job.)

Having got everyone else's agreement, Lawson phoned

Irv Froese, the trucking industry's representative, and by 40 a.m. Friday the assembled functionaries were having the meeting (with the exception of Webster, of course, who was still yacking away on the hotline and planning further

place, negotiations were at a standstill. But within hours a deal had been concluded which (according to the Teamsters) gives them a 35-per-cent increase in two years or (according to the employers) 31.5

per cent in two years.

Either way, it is much more than the eight to 12 per cent per year recommended under the guidelines, and by Sunday afternoon the union guys were cluttering up the roads around

Burnaby Central school and accepting the terms. By 5 p.m.

that day, the first trucks were

Lawson admitted that Pepin's decision to meet directly with the parties was an unusual role for him.

Lawson is out of town, but I put a question to Froese, the employers' man. It went as follows:

"Was it your understanding that agreement was reached as a result of statements made by or information given by the

Answer: "Yes. The AIB helped us to establish new bench marks."

Froese did say that Pepin made it clear that he was not at the meeting to make decisions.

Pepin also said the AIB would not condone any "exorbitant" settlements (like the Teamsters' modest proposal for 25 per cent in one year).

enough knowledge to conclude an agreement.

"We can pause here to wonder about Ed Lawson, who according to one source, said at the meeting that he was wasting a lot of time if his union wouldn't get more than a

creases. The Teamsters, of course, were asking for 25 per cent in one year, yet it seems only yesterday that Ed was

negotiations."

Did Pepin and Chapman engage in negotiations?

Both deny it.

To quote Pepin, whom I phoned:

"We stated the facts of life, gave a review of historical relationship cases (which play a part in the Teamster agreement — Ed.) and told them to

Was it a wise thing to go to the meeting at all?"

"That's a good question," he replied. "We did it because one of the parties (the Teamsters) thought it might be useful."

Pepin said he accorded no special treatment, and didn't know what the terms of the agreement were. The case would be judged on its merits when it came before the board.

Did that mean the agreement could be rolled back?

"You should tell them to suspend their judgment."

Neither Pepin nor Chapman, he went on, could deliver the board to the Teamsters.

We shall see. If the board agrees to 35 (or 31.5) per cent in this case (historical relationships arguments or no historical relationships arguments), the whole bloody anti-inflation thing is a farce and we can all revert to the original state of anarchy. And get ourselves some Liberal

they ate bacon and eggs. Frosties and top of the milk, cheese and the odd slab of cod.

The children did tend to make more fuss about eating the green vegetables but

Maud was able to keep them well supplied with the right vitamins by giving them a lot of fruit pies, fools and blackcurrant syrup. Since blackcurrants have anyway more of the right vitamins than cabbage.

Then, unfortunately, she took her children to the dentist. He looked at the moonscape of their little molars and asked accusingly if they'd been eating SUGAR?

"They must not have these sticky syrups!" he thundered. "They shouldn't be having sugar at all! Haven't you read

Yudkin, and his proofs of the evils of sugar? Stick to a high-fat diet without sugar and your children will grow up with strong, good healthy teeth."

All the better to bite you with, grandma, muttered Maud, but she was a

Marijuana Bail Review Eyed

Three of the five defence lawyers in a major narcotics case heard in Victoria provincial court Tuesday indicated they may seek higher-court reviews of bail set by Judge Harold Alder.

After six persons were charged formally with importing marijuana into Canada Wednesday at the Douglas border crossing on the B.C. mainland, Alder ordered two detained in custody, sets bail for two more at $20,000 each and released the other two on their own recognizance in the sum of $5,000 each.

The judge refused bail for George Falkner, 50, of Texada Island, and Robert Seinen, 24, of West Vancouver. He ordered surety bail for Gerald Garton, 24, of Surrey, and Steven Tony Spigel, 24, of Vancouver. He released Beth Ann Baker, 24, of Texada Island, and Janny Merimina Seinen, 25, of West Vancouver.

Publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details was prohibited in an order issued by Alder at the request of Vancouver lawyer Edward Seiffred, who was appearing for Robert Seinen.

The other lawyers were Pat Good of Vancouver for Janny Seinen, Clifford Watt of Victoria for Garton, Rodney Taylor of Victoria for Spigel and Tom Rafael of Vancouver for Falkner and Baker.

All six facing the joint charge were remanded to Monday when the defense lawyers and prosecutor Gordon Macdonald hope to set dates for a preliminary hearing which one lawyer said might take 10 days.

Officials of the Joint Forces Operation police unit on Vancouver Island gave many details of the case in announcing the arrests last week but publication of this and other background material now is prohibited by the court order.

The police announcement said the case involved seizure of 460 pounds of marijuana, but that figure does not agree with the one given in court during the bail hearing. But the correct figure cannot be published now until the accused are cleared or convicted.

Lawyers for Falkner, Robert Seinen and Spigel indicated they might seek bail reviews in a higher court. One of the visiting lawyers asked about a transcript of Alder's order, which is required for such a review.

Abitibi

Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd., with first-quarter losses of $8.2 million, faces a record 1976, Thomas J. Bell, chairman and chief executive officer, said today.

Abitibi, after record earnings in 1974, went into a serious slump last year which the company blamed on an industry-wide strike and the economic recession. The strike, which began July 9, ended last February.

Bell told the annual meeting of shareholders the cost of the strike amounted to many millions of dollars and lasted far too long."

Abitibi, first of the paper companies to be struck, blamed the prolonged shutdown of its mills for the 1976 first-quarter deficit but the company showed a profit for the month of March.

Results of the first quarter compare with earnings for the same period of last year of $9,063,000 or 49 cents a share.

Metropolitan

Metropolitan Stores of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings of $5,455,859 for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1976.

The company's annual report showed total sales for the year of $137,166,853, an increase of almost $23 million from the previous year. Net earnings increased $1,191,871 from the previous fiscal year.

The company's earning per common share increased to $2.03 for the year from $1.56.

Gibraltar

Gibraltar Mines Ltd. reports first-quarter earnings of $65,000 or four cents a share compared with earnings of $44,000 or less than a cent a share in the same period in 1975.

The company said the average copper price on the London metal exchange was 56 cents a pound during the quarter ended March 31 but prices had improved to nearly 70 cents by Friday.

The company reported, however, that large stocks of copper remain and might pre-

Depot's Fate Left To Budget Session

The Borden Street recycling depot will have to wait for Saanich councils budget session next week to know whether the municipality will give it financial help.

About 20 supporters, many from outside Saanich, attended Monday's council meeting to ask council to reduce the depot's annual rent from $12,000 to $1,000 because of the Capital Regional District's decision to cut the depot's proposed budget of $80,000 by 25 per cent.

The rent paid Saanich is used to repair the building.

Lum told council that Saanich has done more than its share to keep the depot operating, renting the building for $1 a year in the initial years to encourage its survival.

"Everybody on this council agrees that recycling is a good thing . . . but at a cost to whom?" he asked depot coordinator Donald Sher and his supporters.

Lum said the provincial factory inspector insists that certain repairs be done.

Land commissioner Frank Harris said: "There is urgent work to be done — first, the remainder of the roof, secondly, the repair of two skylights. The factory inspector says some source of heat must be supplied for the building — and the completion of illumination for the outside of the building."

Harris estimated a minimum of $9,000 must be spent on the building this year.

Ald. Joe Bourque deplored the "somewhat indifferent" attitude of the regional board in slashing the depot's budget and urged Saanich subsidize the depot for at least the remainder of the year. He said it would cost "a devil of a lot of money" to bring the building up to standard if it was rented out for commercial use.

"We have had offers (for commercial use) of $20,000 a year from people who are willing to undertake renovations at no cost to the municipality," Lum replied.

Ald. Fred Severson, one of Saanich's three representatives on the regional board, told Sher and his supporters that the Saanich representatives had voted in favor of retaining the depot, while many others on the board had wanted it closed.

He said he knew that people who take advantage of Saanich's 25-cent garbage-dumping service on Saturdays did not live in the municipality. He said a survey would probably show this also to be the case with the recycling depot.

Johnson said the depots users and supporters should "put their money where their mouth is and provide support from outside (the municipality)."

Ald. David Paterson said the depot should work on getting additional funds from outlying areas but that Saanich should help "one more year to help them through their time of need."

On the suggestion of Lum, council will decide at its budget session whether to reduce the depot's rent when it considers intermunicipal and other grants.

Rhinestone Cowboy for 39 Years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Elton John met Queen Elizabeth, he picked out a little outfit by Nudie for the occasion.

Nudie, who acknowledges no other name, is western-style clothier to the stars, the original rhinestone cowboy, now marking his 39th year in business.

Probably the most expensive suit he ever made was for Elvis Presley — $10,000. Of course David Cassidy's embroidered leather boots with the neon lights must have set the singer back a little.

Nudie's own tastes run to diamond-encrusted belt buckles at $3,000, gold medallions costing $5,200; and a silver dollar-studded Cadillac priced at $61,000.

His customer list runs from Bob Dylan to Steve McQueen and William Holden. He outfits many famous rock groups and many country and western singers.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Nudie always liked the western image.

"Even when I was a kid, I used to fool around with horses and I always wanted to wear western clothes," he said in an interview.

He refuses to reveal his age, but admits to working as a film cutter in Hollywood in 1918. He later was in the wardrobe business in New York, then returned to California in 1946 and started making western suits in his garage.

He said he "immediately got business from knowing people who were in show business." His earliest customers included Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, Alan Ladd and Clark Gable.

Although Nudie is famous for clothing movie stars, he also deals with the man on the street, who he refers to as a pedestrian.

"You take your average pedestrian," he said. "He'd like to dress western but hasn't got the nerve. Of course, it's a lot better now than it used to be. You take 35, maybe 50 years ago, if you walked out into the street with a red shirt on they'd stone you to death."

Although he has dealt with the movie world's most famous stars, Nudie said he hasn't had any problem clients in Hollywood. But some Broadway chorus line girls used to give him trouble.

"The only temperamental customers I ever had was when I used to be in New York and make G-strings," he said. "Now those girls are temperamental."

HEARING SET

DUNCAN — Provincial court judge Jack Caldwell Tuesday set July 5 for the start of a preliminary hearing for James Rodriguez Melendez charged with two counts of murder punishable by life imprisonment.

Melendez, a 25-year-old U.S. citizen, was returned to Canada April 9 from Springfield, Mo., where he had been held since February on a provisional warrant charging him with the Oct. 24 slaying of James Oldfield, 29, and Pamela Jones, 22, both of the Duncan area.

He appeared in provincial court April 12 and was remanded a week to obtain counsel.

Duncan lawyers Michael Coleman and Richard Nesbitt have been appointed by Legal Aid to represent the accused.

Melendez was also charged Tuesday with two counts of forgery. One alleges he uttered a forged document last Oct. 22 for $1,500 on the savings account of Mrs. Jones. The other alleges he uttered a personal check in the amount of $1,000 drawn on Oldfield's bank account the same day.

(First of a

BANGOR, Wash. — Commander Paul E. Lamey of the United States Navy made it clear.

Even before I waited, cooling my heels in the chill wind outside the fence by the main gate, he had told me on the phone:

"I'm not here to debate Trident or the reasons why it's here with you. The navy has the job of establishing the base in the location decided upon in Washington."

Still, it was worth a look around. And so earlier that day I had left Victoria, where there has been a certain measure of concern over the establishing of the Trident nuclear submarine base only 60 miles away (as the crow flies), and I crossed on the Coho to Port Angeles.

From there I drove through Sequim and on down over the Hood Canal Bridge to this beautiful corner of the Puget Sound.

Surprises are everywhere.

This is peaceful, pastoral country. A pony stands in every backyard, or so it seems. And the color of the land would turn the Irish green with envy.

I was quite surprised to find that there is no such town as Bangor — or even a village of that name. The nearest town is Poulsbo (about four miles away) and here there is only a collection of houses or tiny farms and one store just outside the barbed-wire fence of the base.

I peered through the fence and the collection of Second World War buildings, of stark red brick walls with grey roofs, seemed more like a prison.

Service vehicles come and go continuously, their drivers flashing cards suspended from a chain around their necks. And further up the road, a never-ending stream of contractors' trucks pours in and out of another gate.

Then Commander Lamey arrives from his office in Seattle — where he's officially the Public Affairs Officer for the Thirteenth Naval District.

He's a smart, career man who transferred here from Los Angeles last August. And he's a little edgy about the press.

"We don't feel the press has been that bad," Commander Lamey admits while we wait for separate pass tags to be processed for me and my camera. "However, there have been some groups against Trident — and they have received press coverage. But they are by no means representative of the majority. They're very much in the minority."

First stop was the Trident Training Facility, where workmen are on schedule in constructing the huge buildings that will be used to train all the crews who are going to operate the nuclear submarines.

Then it was on to more construction sites as we watched contractors toil on various barracks, many of them tucked in hideaway places cut out of the bush. Here, Commander Lamey pointed out that a lot of trouble has been taken to try to maintain the ecology wherever possible.

"Trees that don't need to be cut have been left and this has created awful headaches for the contractors," he said. "We have deer and bear in the woods," he noted.

Finally, before returning to the main gate to end our tour, we visited the waterfront area to see where the refit pier and nearby the explosives handling wharf are being constructed in the Hood Canal.

The pier will extend about 500 feet out in the natural waterway, which is about one-and-a-half miles across.

'Designed to Be a Deterrent'

will, said the Commander, avoid impact on salmon migration and be as attractive as possible to maintain the beauty of the countryside.

"So, we're doing as much as we can," he said.

Critics in both the United States and Canada have taken a swipe not only at the choice of location but at the very nature of the Trident system, labelling it a first-strike force and a threat to world peace.

Commander Lamey, despite his earlier warnings to me, decided to defend the location and to launch a few vocal missiles of his own.

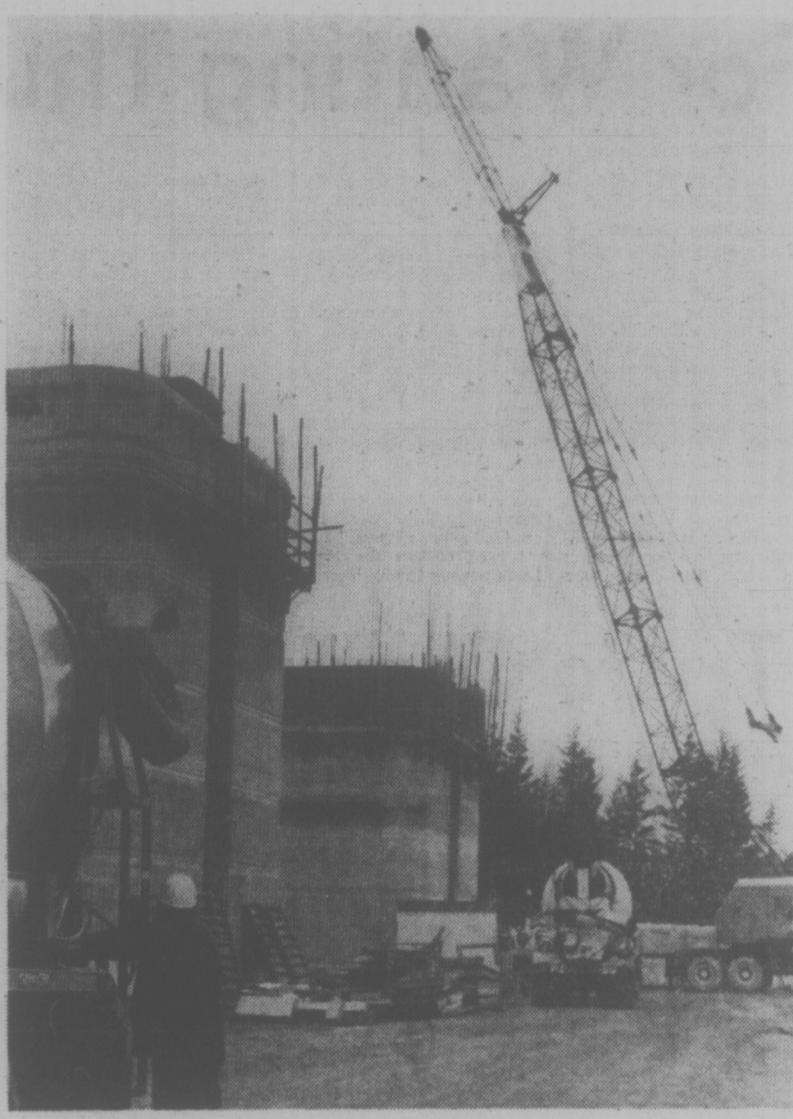

"This area was chosen because the base was already here and no more land needed to be acquired," he said. "And because of the fine, deep channel in the Hood Canal, and because of the convenience of having both the naval shipyard and naval hospital at nearby Bremerton."

"It's designed to be a deterrent, to maintain some kind of stability if we're going to keep some sort of posture in this changing world of ours," the commander said. "We feel we need the submarine package not only to replace our aging sub system but also to provide a meaningful deterrent.

"The Trident system is designed for one purpose only — to prevent nuclear war. There is no international law which binds all nations to a commitment freeing the world from the threat of nuclear war. Until such a treaty is made, the nations which have the ability to start such a war, cannot be prevented from doing so if that is their wish. But they can be discouraged if they know severe retaliation will be the result.

"This strategy is called deterrence ... and Trident is a deterrent weapon."

DELAYS, COSTS BOG GRAND HOUSING PLAN

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Seven years ago Saanich began buying land in the Roy Road area to create a housing development where people could build homes on reasonably priced lots.

Mayor Ed Lum told council Monday it will be at least another 18 months before the first house is built.

"Even if everything goes smoothly from now on it will be 18 months before the first home is built," Lum warned.

Lum said Saanich had bought about 60 acres at minimum prices to provide lots at reasonable cost but "the entire scheme has changed. The lots will now be at market value, the concept has changed so drastically."

He blamed the years of delay and the "tremendously high servicing costs" for the defeat of council's original ambition to provide reasonably-priced lots.

The plan is to provide a whole new neighborhood on more than 100 acres bounded by Wilkinson, Carey, Interurban, Chesterfield and Clinton.

The delays began in March of 1974 when the former NDP provincial government began "dictating" the levels of density in the development, according to Lum.

The government produced plans that more than doubled the density Saanich had envisioned, proposing 20 persons per acre compared to Saanich's 6.4 persons per acre.

"They're certainly out of reach of most people today," Lum confirmed. The density figures now being proposed by the government's Dunhill Passmore Place housing project, the units would be too highly priced.

Asked by Ald. David Paterson what the highest density in the Roy Road project will be, municipal planner Gil Laurenson reported Dunhill is planning "townhouses at approximately 10 units an acre to ensure a 200-year flood plain."

In order to have control over what type of housing is built by Dunhill the council voted Monday to declare the site a development area as the first step toward entering into a land-use contract with Dunhill.

The council also approved a bylaw setting out the areas which will be replotted by Dunhill.

"If we don't like the scheme we can say so."

Ald. Fred Severson wondered if like Dunhill's Passmore Place housing project, the units would be too highly priced at the next full council meeting.

Ald. John McDonald, who had made the motion to increase the mayor's salary by eight per cent, raising it from $16,500 to $17,180, and aldermen's salaries by $600 to $6,000 a year, did not attend Monday's council meeting.

The increase is expected to be debated at the next and final budget session within 10 days.

If the pay increase stands it will be the second council vote itself in four months.

The council voted themselves a 12.4 per cent increase in mid-December. Both increases are retroactive.

The meeting takes place 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 27.

Efficient Firemen, Luck Prevent Towering Inferno

Smoke ejector on way up

A combination of good luck and good management prevented an inferno from developing in the towering 23-storey Orchard House apartment-condominium block at 647 Michigan Tuesday afternoon.

The good luck was provided by a resident who happened to be walking in the 14th floor hallway shortly before 2 p.m. and noticed smoke seeping under apartment 1409.

The good management was supplied by the Victoria firemen who reached the scene within two minutes from the nearby hall, at Oswego and Superior, and quickly doused the fire which was confined to a bedroom area.

Deputy Chief Carl Coates estimated damage at $3,500. He said the fire started near the floor level in a cardboard carton placed beside a hot water radiator. The cause is still under investigation.

Tenant Sadie Cancar was not at home at the time.

Coates said early detection and prompt action averted a major fire.

Despite the fact the maximum reach of the fire department's aerial equipment is 100 feet or eight storeys, fires in highrises are generally attacked from inside the building and not from the exterior, he said.

He noted the Orchard House block, built under the 1965 building code, has numerous fire safety features. There are two hydrant outlets on each floor, and the solid core doors to each apartment are 12 inches thick designed to prevent the spread of fire upwards of three quarters of an hour.

As long as tenants know the fire rules and exercise proper precautions, he said, they should be able to make a safe exit no matter what floor they live on.

been awarded to Poole Construction Ltd.

Although several board members argued that the university should delay the auditorium altogether until the whole thing could be financed, the view was not shared by UVic chancellor Robert T. Wallace.

The university is striving hard to serve the total community and the auditorium would be a tremendous asset. We've got the money to put up the walls and if we decided to wait the cost will increase eight to 10 per cent a year.

"I'd be very disappointed if we decide against proceeding with the auditorium," said Wallace; "we'd be losing a great asset for a very long time."

Board member Dr. I. D. Pal suggested that critical space needs for already existing programs should be considered.

Another possibility, he said, would be to split construction into two sections: go ahead with the administrative section now and delay the auditorium.

The recommendation to go ahead with the structure of the auditorium "gives us the possibility of completing in the future," argued Petch.

"We won't know what the capital grant (from the provincial government) will be for a couple of weeks and the work already, some from university students. The UVic job-finding office closes at month's end and the activities will move to the Yates centre.

High school students and other young people will also be finding work through the Yates office.

Jobs for young people already available range from being special RCMP constables to milking cows and will soon include a wide range of park and recreation "jobs" like lifeguard, park attendant for Fort Rodd and a park job at Long Beach.

Elsewhere the employment picture is not bright.

Unemployment in the forest and construction industries means students will be competing with experienced workers for those jobs and the chances of students obtaining work there are slim.

The provincial government will hire fewer students because of budget cutbacks and the federal government has ended its Opportunities for Youth work program that employed about 100 young people last year in the Victoria area.

Some provincially-funded job programs may not be repeated this year. Canada Manpower is still awaiting confirmation on these programs.

Not all the news is bad, however.

The Canada Manpower office has opened at 546 Yates (second floor) and is taking applications for jobs.

"We have already placed 30 young people and the jobs are beginning to flow in," says University of Victoria graduate Anne Walker, 24.

ANOTHER SIDE?

A man sought by the RCMP after terrorizing campers near Fort Renfrew Sunday walked into the Duncan RCMP office late Tuesday and gave officers his side of the story.

Police wouldn't release the name of the man or details of his version of the incident. No charges have been laid as yet.

Police said a big man in his early 20s swaggered into the Fairy Lake campgrounds Sunday afternoon, punched — a camper in the mouth, got involved in a scuffle with another man, then left and returned brandishing a gasoline bomb and threatening "to do everyone in."

He departed in his car when a camper fired a shotgun blast into some trees. One camper noted the license number of the vehicle.

The same man is believed involved in a second incident later that afternoon on Cowichan Lake Road.

Auditorium 'Shell' in UVic Plan

Contractor has agreed we can add any of the deleted parts without any increase in the total estimate." (Poole's bid for the total complex was $7.9 million. Design and plans make up the rest of the $1 million over-run.)

Otherwise, he said, there is the distinct possibility the auditorium would not be able to go ahead at all.

Board chairman Joseph Cundliffe said it would be wrong for the board to view the auditorium as some "far out cultural center" to be used on rare occasions."

He said the auditorium would be the prime assembly place on campus.

"I would not consider putting up a shell and letting it sit there alone. High tenders are not sufficient reason to cancel the project."

The board should decide to proceed, try to get the extra funding and then finish the building, he said.

The board was forced to decide on the centre's future before the tenders expire April 30 and could not wait to see how much money will be in the province's capital grant.

Deletions include $340,000 for auditorium equipment; $789,000 for interior design; $173,000 for a kitchen and other common deletions in both the auditorium and the administrative complex valued at about $45,000.

Don Has a Special Reason For Wanting Thursday Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Nothing would taste better to Don Saleski than a victory for Philadelphia Flyers on Thursday night at Toronto.

Saleski scored three times Tuesday night to help the Flyers humble Toronto Maple Leafs 7-1 in a National Hockey League playoff game.

The win gives the Flyers a 3-2 edge in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final.

Saleski, 26, is one of three Flyers' facing criminal charges in connection with last Thursday's brawl-filled game between Philadelphia and the Leafs at Toronto.

The first question that hit him after Tuesday's game was whether the criminal charges were on his mind.

"Well, it's behind me," said Saleski.

However, he added thoughtfully, "but gee, it's two to five years."

"Sure it (the three goals) gave me a lot of satisfaction because of that. But I would like to beat 'em in Toronto to show them we can beat 'em there."

The real tough part (of the Toronto incident) was its effect on my family. I phoned my wife right away. But my mother and father (in Calgary) only knew what they read in the newspapers."

It was obvious the Maple Leafs were in trouble Tuesday almost from the outset. The Flyers played the disciplined hockey that led them to two Stanley Cups.

Bill Barber got the first goal at 3:55 of the opening period, a five-footer past Toronto goalie, Wayne Thomas, who was screened.

The Flyers outshot the Leafs 16-12 in the first period. Early in the second period they broke loose—scoring three times in one minute and 33 seconds.

Saleski started it when Toronto defenceman Ian Turnbull tossed the disc toward the Toronto blue line with the Leafs on a power play.

Turnbull's pass was intended for Borje Salming, but Salming fell. Saleski, skating in from the bench, grabbed the puck and beat Thomas on a one-and-one confrontation.

The goal that made it 2-0 at 10:04 of the second period.

Toronto came back 28 seconds later, with Bob Neely beating Bernie Parent from about 12 feet.

But 52 seconds later, Gary Dornhoefer scored on a deflection. It took only another 13 seconds for Saleski to score his second goal.

Saleski, with his third goal, and Reggie Leach, with two goals, completed the Philadelphia scoring in the final period.

Toronto coach Red Kelly

made no excuses for his team.

"We just didn't have it to-night (Tuesday)," Kelly said. "They beat us to the puck early and often. We were standing."

"The ice was level," he concluded, referring to his charge last week that the Flyers shaved the ice behind the nets to suit their style of play.

The Philadelphia fans took out their feelings about the Toronto game at the start of the night by boozing the Canadian national anthem.

The Flyers' management pulled out all the stops, replacing the Star Spangled Banner with the club's good luck song, Kate Smith singing God Bless America.

Try to Convince the Kings Brad Park Isn't Healthy

BOSTON (AP) — Less than seven weeks ago all-star defenceman Brad Park underwent left knee surgery to repair torn cartilage.

He joined Bobby Orr on the sidelines and the Bruins had reason for considerable concern.

Unlike Orr, however, Park made a remarkable recovery and managed to get himself into playing shape. Now he's leading the Bruins in the National Hockey League.

Park scored two goals, one while Boston was short-handed and the second on a power play, and assisted on two others Tuesday night as the Bruins whipped Los Angeles Kings 7-1 to take a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final.

"I feel good, better with every game," Park said.

"Some shifts I feel better than on others, but I don't think about anything like that on the ice. I try to play according to the tempo of the game."

With unusually warm weather settled in the Boston area, the Garden was hot and sultry for the fifth game of the series. However, Park summed up the Bruins' reaction, saying: "It was hot out there, but you put it out of your mind."

Boston coach Don Cherry said the defenceman still isn't fully recovered.

"Park played well, but he's still only 75 to 80 per cent back and has got quite a way to go. However, it's nice to have him."

Cherry said the Bruins played well after spotting Los Angeles an early lead on Marcotte's power-play goal.

Local Urbanized Streams Coming Under Scrutiny

Some day, in the not-too-distant future, youngsters living in the highly-urbanized Victoria area might not have to travel very far to find quality fishing.

Dr. Bob Langford, a consulting biologist, outlined some work he has embarked upon that could turn this vision into reality during a recent meeting of the Amalgamated Conservation Society.

Langford is studying Craigflower Creek under the federal provincial salmonid enhancement program and is currently doing a detailed analysis of small streams in Saanich, including Colquitz Creek, under funding from the municipality.

"What we're trying to do is quantify the effect of urbanization on rivers," he explained.

Streams such as the Colquitz have a tremendous strain on them in terms of water use, lack of water and poor water quality while others such as Craigflower, despite being near a centre of population, are a little better off in terms of water quality because most of the system is still forested.

For the first few years, most of Langford's time will be spent accumulating baseline data. This involves determining the population levels of both resident and non-resident fish of each species as well as establishing the limiting factors that stem from urbanization.

"Following that, we will hopefully have a restoration program," added Langford.

Some of the restoration measures will include installing incubation boats for rearing salmonid eggs, improving side channels for spawning and greater overwinter survival and rejuvenating water quality.

Langford cited three examples of progressive deterioration in stream quality.

Tod Creek, which flows primarily through agricultural land, suffers from problems brought about by excessive amounts of nutrient material being swept into the stream by runoff.

Colquitz Creek, which runs through high-density development, has even more pronounced pollution problems, low oxygen levels and high summer water temperatures because most shade trees have been removed.

The final stage of degradation is reflected in Bowker Creek, which is so developed that "only a hundred feet of it is not put into a pipe."

"We're trying to quantify and put down in writing how to avoid these progresses," said Langford.

In addition to increasing awareness on a biological level, Langford is determined to press forward on the political level.

"What we want to do is increase the awareness of the politicians and powers-that-be about what's going on and how to avoid it."

FRAN'S PACT EXTENDED

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The National Football League's Minnesota Vikings have announced a two-year extension of quarterback Fran Tarkenton's contract.

His previous contract had been signed through 1976. Tarkenton's new pact calls for the same terms, but extends that by one year.

"I just think a pitcher has a right to try to contain the hitters," he said. "If a pitcher feels like he's been intimidated, he has to do something. I hit them as a certain measure that had to be done."

In Tuesday's other National League game, Philadelphia Phillies topped Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3. San Diego Padres beat Cincinnati Reds 7-5. San Francisco Giants outscored Atlanta Braves 12-11 in 10 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers clipped Houston Astros 6-3.

Rain prevented a game at Chicago between the Cubs and Montreal Expos.

Checkers to Fold

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Stockholders of Charlotte Checkers, champions of the Southern Hockey League, have voted to authorize club directors to dissolve the organization. Club president Al Manch said this year's club lost "close to $100,000," its biggest deficit in 20 years of hockey in Charlotte.

Langford cited three examples of progressive deterioration in stream quality.

Tod Creek, which flows primarily through agricultural land, suffers from problems brought about by excessive amounts of nutrient material being swept into the stream by runoff.

Colquitz Creek, which runs through high-density development, has even more pronounced pollution problems, low oxygen levels and high summer water temperatures because most shade trees have been removed.

"We're trying to quantify and put down in writing how to avoid these progresses," said Langford.

Victoria Shamrocks and Nanaimo Timbers renew their Western Lacrosse Association rivalry in an exhibition game Saturday in Parksville.

The game gets underway at 8 p.m. in District 69 Arena.

For a time it appears as if a strike by Canadian Union of Public Employees' workers would force cancellation of the game, but local 401 president Stan Boshier said pickets would be lifted so the game can proceed.

Proceeds from the exhibition got toward minor lacrosse in the area.

Canadians Show Progress

LEICESTER, England (CP) — Canada's national soccer team played to a 1-1 draw against Leicester City reserves, the professional club's youthful second team, in an exhibition game Tuesday.

Previously the Canadians had scored three straight victories in their 10-game tour, including a 2-1 win over Leicester County Selects Monday night. Canadian scorers in that game were Bob Bolitho of Victoria and John Connor, a Scottish-born player with New Westminster Blues. Bolitho also scored in Tuesday's game, with a blistering drive from 30 yards out.

Coach Colin Morris, a native of Worcester, England, said as his club headed for Glasgow, Scotland, that the team now has completed "Phase One" of its tour objectives, concentrating on conditioning.

The next objective in the warm-up tour prior to the Olympic Games, he said, was "to learn to play as a team."

Because players come from all over Canada they had not had much experience in that line.

The benefit of the British tour was that it gave the Canadians a chance "to have a lot of games at varying levels without too much travel." Their next game is in Glasgow, Friday.

He said several players had shown remarkable progress during the tour: Bolitho, Peter Ross and Carl Ross of Toronto, Keven Grant of Hamilton and goalkeeper Tino Letieri of Quebec Selects, the youngest player at age 19.

Campbell Likes Soccer System

MONTREAL (CP) — Violence in hockey may lead the sport to adopt soccer's practice of "booking" players who display general misconduct without drawing a penalty, suggests Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League.

He also said he would like a surrogate, or extra official, in the stands at all games to report a player who went undetected in delivering cheap shots but who would be punished later.

The surrogate or an official on the ice could book a player for general misconduct, just as in the case in soccer.

"You may notice that a player is guilty of misbehavior of a general character, picking fights, hitting after the whistle blows . . . but not of one thing which merits a match penalty," Campbell said.

"His misbehavior might go on throughout a game or a series of games. Then we would, as they say in soccer, take his name and discipline would be taken by the president's office."

CROW BAN LIFTED

CALGARY (CP) — The suspension imposed last week on Calgary Cowboys' coach Joe Crozier was lifted Tuesday by World Hockey Association president Ben Hatskin.

Hatskin said in a telegram to league trustees that an application by Bill Hay of Calgary, new Cowboys' president, had been approved and Crozier is "free to continue his coaching duties . . . ."

Crozier has been functioning only as general manager since suspension for his part in a brawl during a playoff game April 11 in Quebec City. He will be behind the bench Friday night when Calgary and Winnipeg Jets begin the best-of-seven Canadian division final.

Hay welcomed the decision on behalf of the Cowboys and Crozier said, "The only thing I ask for is the same amount of publicity for this decision as was given to the initial suspension."

Danny Lawson, Calgary captain who was suspended for one game — the first he has missed in the four-year history of the WHA — also was pleased with the decision.

"There is no doubt we missed. The Crow in the last games of the Quebec series because he built this team and he brought us together."

Harry Howell (Crozier's temporary replacement) as coach did an outstanding job but The Crow's ability to make the adjustments and shift our lines when we aren't going well will be a big help against Winnipeg."

While waiting Tuesday afternoon for Hatskin's decision on the telegram from Hay, Crozier looked forward to the Winnipeg series.

"I'm overjoyed that we beat Quebec," he said.

"We've climbed a mountain but there's another mountain yet to go. We have to beat Winnipeg in the Canadian final and then we can look ahead to the next series against whoever we play from the American section."

Crozier said Winnipeg is a better team than Quebec "because they're more mobile."

Calgary exploited the aging legs of J. C. Tremblay and the lack of speed of Bill Prentice and Pierre Roy for many of their goals against the Nordiques.

"We have to be ready for that big line of Winnipeg (Bobby Hull, Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg) and we have to remember that (Veli-Pekka) Ketola killed us and Peter Sullivan got some big goals against us."

Crozier, suspended because Hatskin agreed to Quebec's suggestion that Crozier was responsible for the brawl between Quebec and Calgary last weekend, said he doesn't want to talk about the brawl any more.

"Winnipeg wants us to be thinking about it," he said. "I'm sure the Winnipeg Jets don't want us to be thinking about them, but we're starting now."

"We haven't made many decisions on how we'll play them yet but we know the Winnipeg coach (Bobby Kromm) said Quebec would knock us off in four straight, so he isn't too worried about us."

Umpires' Clinic

Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League will hold a clinic for umpires and persons interested in becoming umpires at 10 a.m. Sunday in Central Park. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Lew McCorkell at 598-2632.

More than half of all NHL games now are attended by league officiating supervisors, but all except two disciplinary measures against players are meted out by officials on the ice. Only if a player receives a match penalty or a game misconduct does a "supplementary level of discipline," wielded by the league president, take effect.

Thus instances of gross misconduct may escape game officials, especially if they are involved in separating combatants, and subsequently go unpunished.

Campbell's comments followed a brawl-filled Stanley Cup quarter-final playoff game last Thursday night between Philadelphia Flyers and the Maple Leafs in Toronto which resulted in criminal charges against three Flyers players.

Campbell said films of the game do not support McMurry's action.

That is the great advantage of being a Crown prosecutor. We can be attacked collectively — and we're usually being attacked collectively — as Neanderthals. It is embarrassing, being on defence, but being aware of all the facts, that we cannot attack back.

"I recognize the primacy of the attorney-general's office over the league. The attorney-general, after all, represents the public conscience. I do not want to jeopardize the defense of the prosecuted individuals . . . a defense, from what I have seen, I believe will be successful."

Campbell said no player will be banned from the NHL for being the aggressor in a one-on-one fist fight as long as he presides over the league.

"I've said it time and again and I know that there are many students of human behavior who disagree with me. But with my considerable experience, I feel the safest and most satisfactory reaction to being fouled is by retaliating with a punch in the nose."

But he said the Flyers still are "crying about all the penalties they get, pushing a glove in the opposing player's face, giving a shot to somebody after the whistle has blown . . . not quite enough for the referee to hand out a penalty for."

A punitive measure for general misbehavior could eliminate that kind of conduct, Campbell said.

Sports Caravan arrives at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre next Monday - complete with pitching machines, fake ice and a motto: "try it."

The idea is to come and take a look - maybe take a kick or a swing or a shot - on the lookout for sports or games which will help keep you healthy.

It's the federal government's travelling smorgasbord of activities, intended to stimulate soft Canadians to do something (puff, puff) to catch up to those vigorous Swedes.

From 12:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. daily from Monday to Saturday, young and old throughout the Capital district are invited to take a look at 66 different kinds of sports - find out what's available through local clubs, perhaps grab the chance for a little coaching from local experts.

It's the first visit for Sports Canada's caravan to Victoria, a show which travels in a giant van and will be set up on the centre's curling surface.

Since 1972 the caravan has travelled more than 30,000 miles and presented some 80 exhibitions from Halifax to Vancouver. It promotes sports activities by giving spectators a crack at them - targets to kick at with a soccer ball, to throw at with a baseball.

Machines which lob tennis balls for you to belt are among the more intriguing displays, as is a plastic ice surface for hockey and skating displays.

Demonstrations include tumbling, skiing and the martial arts.

While all this sounds particularly suited to youngsters, the exhibition is intended for adults, too, and particularly for families.

Created and operated by the Fitness and Amateur Sport Branch of the Health and Welfare department, it is being supported in B.C. by the provincial secretary's department.

City Boats in Winners' Circle

Two Royal Victoria Yacht Club boats ended up in the winner's circle in the eighth annual Strait of Georgia race on the weekend.

Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm sailed his Swan 44 Annie Cadby to first place in Division I of the International Off-shore Rule fleet.

Mike Weir's Flyer Brigg ended in second place in Division C of the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats.

The first boat to finish in the record 129-boat field was the former America's Cup 12-metre defender Weatherly from Seattle. She finished the 143-mile race in 21.2 hours but failed to win top honors because of her handicap.

The first IOR boat over-all and winner of Division III was Ken Pearce's The Pearce Arrow of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club. She was followed in Division III by Prospector of the Seattle Yacht Club and Charles Croft's Strike of the West Vancouver Yacht Club.

Placing after Annie Cadby in Division I was Robert Alexander's Scaramouche of SYC and Alvin Nard's Sun Bird of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

John Newton's Peterson 41 Pacena of WVC won in Division II, edging out Stewart Nelson's Smokey of SYC and Per Christoffersen's Terna III of WVC.

In Division IV it was Robert Newell's Topkota of the Bellingham Yacht Club, followed by Phil Tucker's Jada of the Corinthian Yacht Club in Seattle and Mike Pope's Vatican II of the Kitsilano Yacht Club.

Vic Nielsen's Moonglow IV of the Tacoma Yacht Club was first over-all in the PHRF fleet and winner of Division A. Placing after her in Division A were Gene Sibold's Small World II of the South Sound Sailing Society in Tacoma and Gerald Smith's Bittersweet of TYC.

The first three boats in Division B were Patrick Hill's Sky One Hundred of WVC, Patrick Jutte's Rapture of CYC and John Fairley's Dynasty II of WVC.

Vic Bishop's Brigadier of WVC won Division C. Charles McCann's Nina del Mar of the Olympic Yacht Club placed third.

A BASIC CONFERENCE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Habitat, the United Nations conference on human settlements, will be about our daily bread, not about a lot of esoteric diplomatic matters, British economist Barbara Ward told nearly 700 members of the University of British Columbia Alumni Association Tuesday night.

"Habitat will also be about shelter, work and the ability to live on this planet without destroying it," she said. The 62-year-old scholar said

Ray Green portrays Germany, from the crowded harbors of the North Sea to the snowy slopes of the Bavarian Alps. He conveys in color film the pictorial splendors of an intriguing country. The beautiful valley of The Rhine Towns with narrow streets and overhanging timbered houses. Serene and tranquil country-side. The tremendous Black Forest region with its woodcarvers and cuckoo-clock makers.

"by the beginning of the next century we will have enough additional people to make another world on top of the one we've got already."

These people will be mostly in emerging nations and will be unlike their forebears in that they won't be patient but will demand human dignity and will get it one way or another.

The solution to this problem can only be to share willingly and soon our affluence, she said.

WALLY WOBLES IN U.K.

PRESTWICK, Scotland (AP) — Wobbling Wally Watts, 27, an Edmonton, railway inspector who is trying to become the first man to ride around the world on a unicycle, arrived here Tuesday and was almost immediately stopped by police.

"They asked all sorts of questions and went off shaking their heads," said Watts.

"I'm sure they thought what I was doing was illegal—especially when they found I had no brakes."

But after the incident a mile from Prestwick airport, Watt's road smoothed and he wobbled off toward a rendezvous with the lord mayor of Glasgow.

Watts plans to visit Edinburgh and London, then pedal through Europe, Turkey, Pakistan, India, Malaysia, Australia and New Zealand before winding up with a trans-continental wobble from Los Angeles to New York.

"Then I'll write a book on the trip and the people I've met," said Watts, who became interested in one-wheeled bicycles when he saw them on television seven years ago.

Besides his home-built unicycle, Watts' globe-girdling equipment includes jeans with leather patches on the seat that get 1,500 miles to the pair. Regular jeans last only 300 miles on a unicycle.

A Quiet Celebration

Times News Services

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth turned 50 today and celebrated with a pre-birthday family dinner party and a stately Royal ball at Windsor Castle.

The dinner party Tuesday night was a strictly private affair for the Royal Family and the Queen's closest friends — about 60 guests in all, including the recently separated Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon.

The Queen's husband, Prince Philip, was there, as were her four children Prince Charles, Princess Anne, Prince Edward and Prince Andrew. So was the Queen Mother.

Prime Minister James Callaghan said he was unable to attend because of the demands of his new job. He was invited to dinner next week.

There was champagne in royal quantities for toasting the Queen's health at midnight. Messages of tribute poured in for the Queen, affectionately regarded by many Britons as a comfortable anchor in a sea of change.

"I made a dress for her very first ball, when she was 15," said royal dressmaker Norman Hartnell, "and she is still as charming now at the age of 50. She is sweet, sincere and unsophisticated."

In her 24-year reign the Queen has presided over a shrinking empire and a declining economy with a grace and a dignity that has won affection from her subjects and made her a symbol of stability and national unity.

At 50, The Queen is still a hard-working professional, reading through all the state papers that chronicle the complex legislation passed by her government and entertaining 30,000 guests each year at Royal garden parties.

Whether investing titles up to some of the 3,000 people she honors every year, attending historic and colorful pageants, or meeting her subjects in the streets and factories, the Queen is watched and photographed wherever she goes.

HAVANA — Fidel Castro has described President Ford as a vulgar liar for concealing the fact that South Africa sent troops to Angola before Cuba. "President Ford called the Cuban premier an international outlaw during political chatter in Miami," Castro told a rally on the 15th anniversary of the U.S.-backed Bay of Pigs invasion. "I am not going to answer his insult. It is enough to say Ford is a vulgar liar." Castro also accused Henry Kissinger of lying about South African intervention in Angola. At the same time, he threatened to call off the 1973 anti-hijacking agreement between the U.S. and Cuba if there is a repeat of a recent attack against Cuban fishing boats by anti-Castro exiles in Florida. One Cuban fisherman was killed earlier this month in a machinegun attack on two fishing boats in the Strait of Florida. Cuban exiles in Miami later claimed responsibility.

B R I S B A N E — Wilson Smyth, 47, a timber cutter, set what police called a record when he registered 40 per cent blood alcohol on a breath analysis machine. Charged Tuesday with driving a car while under the influence of alcohol, he was fined $350 and banned from driving for 15 months. Government medical officers estimated Smyth's alcohol reading taken at the end of a three-day binge to be equivalent to drinking 122 seven-ounce beers.

H A L I F A X — Caralyn Bowes, 23, of Ottawa left on foot Tuesday to run 3,800 miles to Vancouver. Miss Bowes, who expects to lose 10 pounds during the cross-Canada trip, plans to run 35 miles a day for four months, arriving in Vancouver in time to register for fall classes at Simon Fraser University. Her mother is accompanying her in a camper van.

M O N T R E A L — There's no place like home — unless your son is operating a motorcycle repair shop in your basement. Michael Boyle of nearby Chomedy said his family and neighbors can't take any more of his 26-year-old son David's noise. So Boyle has applied for an injunction to evict David from the parental home.

Zoya Fyodorova . . . and her exit visa

M C M C O W — Actress Zoya Fyodorova, whose daughter was born of a Second World War romance with a United States naval officer, has received her exit visa from Soviet officials for a trip to the U.S. for the birth of her daughter's child. Miss Fyodorova, 64, who got word last week that permission had been granted for the trip, picked up the three-month visitor's visa Tuesday after paying the normal fee of $34. She said she hoped to leave in eight days, two weeks before the birth, due May 11. Zoya's daughter, Victoria, flew to the U.S. last April to meet her father, Jackson Tate, a retired admiral living in Florida. Victoria, 30, later married an U.S. commercial pilot, Fred Poy.

Nuclear Experts Suspended

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — The company which operates the idled Hanford nuclear reactor has suspended six technicians from refusing to take a recertification test, a spokesman said today.

Three technicians were suspended Monday night when they reported for a graveyard shift and another three were suspended this morning, said William Catts, director of legal and employee relations for United Nuclear Industries, Inc. (UNI).

Test failures by 18 of 19 technicians taking the recertification tests last Thursday forced UNI to close the facility Friday.

Catts said the remaining 12 technicians would be offered an opportunity to take the tests when they report for their shifts.

The suspended technicians were sent home without pay. Asked how long they would be suspended, Catts replied, "that has not yet been determined."

The reactor — 260 miles southeast of Vancouver — produces plutonium for the U.S. government's nuclear weapons and sells steam for electrical power to the Washington public power supply system.

Breakfast In School Defeated

Greater Victoria school board vice-chairman Susan Brice Monday night accused Trustee Lavinia Greenwood of cleverly wording a motion in an attempt to get it passed by the board.

"But it won't work this time," said Brice.

At issue was Greenwood's proposal to get $800 financing for a breakfast program at S. J. Willis Junior High school.

Greenwood suggested the board earmark 10 per cent of its $8,000 fund for convention travel expenses, a move trustees wouldn't support.

"The way the motion's worded if we defeat it it will sound like trustees would rather carouse at conventions rather than feed undernourished children," said Brice.

Brice said the board couldn't finance food programs because it would establish a precedent.

Only Greenwood and Trustee Dr. Hal Knight voted for it.

The breakfast program started at the school so students would receive a nutritious breakfast before school begins.

$14 VALVES COST CITY $4,250 LOSS

PORT ALBERNI—It looked like a good deal five years ago when the works department found just the valve fitting it needed in a local department store for $14.

The fitting, to be used in manholes, required just a minor adjustment and this was done in the department's own work shop. The city engineer simply removed a part that wasn't needed.

Since then the works department has bought and modified many such fittings. But not any more.

After five years, the manufacturer, C. B. Trapp Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, heard about it and sued for patent infringement.

The city solicitor looked into the case and council has approved his recommendation for an out-of-court settlement of $4,250.

Indians Support American

Indian groups plan a major rally in front of the legislature Saturday afternoon in support of Leonard Peltier, wanted in the U.S. to face a charge of attempted murder.

Peltier is the subject of an extradition hearing under way in Vancouver and spokesmen for the American Indian Movement say he is certain to be killed if he is returned to the U.S. for trial.

He is wanted for two charges of murdering FBI agents, two of attempted murder and one charge of burglary.

Ken Basil of the Cache Creek Warrior Society said Tuesday that 36 Indians who took part in clashes with government and police at Wounded Knee, S.D., three years ago have since been "assassinated" and threats have been made against Peltier's life.

The rally is scheduled for 1 p.m.

North Island Highway Job Postponed

COURTENAY—Two contracts to complete the North Island Highway between Kelsey Bay and Port Hardy on northern Vancouver Island will not be awarded this year, according to MLA Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox).

The contracts would have completed the section between Woss Camp and Tsitsik River.

Sanford said despite appeals in the legislature, the government will not bridge the "incredible gap."

She accused the government of "victimizing north islanders as part of its over-all strategy of political gamemanship."

Ms. Sanford said the preliminary highways budget of the New Democratic Party before the December election contained provisions for the two contracts.

One-Dish Hot Meal Great for Picnics

One way to save money these spring days is to take picnic meals to a nearby park or beach on the weekend, instead of driving 20 to 50 miles to a site and picking up snack foods on the way. The park provides a change for everyone, and nobody is tired with the drive when you get there. There is energy left for exploring and an active game as well as for eating.

To be sure, someone has to plan the meal ahead of time but it need not be elaborate, though it should be different in some way to what is served at home. Preferably, it should not be sandwiches for three reasons. One, sandwiches are often the daily lunch packed for school or office and a picnic should offer something special. A second point against sandwiches is they are tedious to make and, third, they consist of more bread than needed by most people at one meal.

While the weather is still fresh and spring-like, a hot lunch is appropriate. Some of the preparation will be done the previous day so that only combining and baking remains for the last hour.

Individual baking dishes, such as the brown glazed bean pots with lids and long handles often seen selling at a quite reasonable price, are very suitable and useful for all kinds of meals at home either indoors or outdoors all year. I find they keep the food piping hot when packed into warmed thick newspaper in a flat cardboard carton. No extra dishes are needed; no spooning out or serving.

An alternative is a large casserole with a lid, for a larger number of people, though more dishes must be taken for serving and the food becomes cooled.

Here are two suggestions for early picnics. First, is Baked Egg with Smoked Jowl; second, Baked Rice with Cheese.

Both are satisfying, needing only a serving of salad with a special dressing to finish the meal. The recipes are each for one individual baking dish. Increase as needed for number of servings. Jowls are lower priced than conventional bacon.

Baked Egg with Smoked Pork Jowl

2 Tbsp cooked spinach, green peas or beans
1 small egg
2 slices cooked jowl (or ham)
1/2 cup soft wholewheat crumbs
1 level tbsp soft margarine
Paprika and chopped parsley.

Grease the baking dish; spoon in the cooked vegetable, either prepared and leftover from previous day or from a freshly opened can if necessary.

Break the egg into dish over the vegetable. Cut fried jowl or ham into small pieces; spread over egg. Top with crumbs, including crusts cut fine, dot with margarine. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Bake in moderate oven at 177 deg. C. for 15 minutes, to cook egg and heat through thoroughly. This serves one.

Place heated lid on the dish; pack at once into warmed newspaper in carton. The second suggestion of Baked Rice with Cheese is equally good and certainly inexpensive. Cook the brown rice the day before. For each baking dish:

Baked Rice with Cheese
1/2 cup cooked brown rice
1/4 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup skim milk from powder
2 tbsp soft wholewheat crumbs
1 tsp soft margarine
Paprika and chopped parsley.
Grease baking dish lightly. Spoon in cooked brown rice.

Spread with grated Cheddar cheese. Pour in the skim milk; add double the usual amount of skim milk powder to the water for extra goodness and flavor. Top with breadcrumbs; dot with margarine.

Sprinkle with paprika and parsley.

Bake uncovered in moderate oven at 177 deg. C. until browned, about 25 minutes. Cover with warmed lid when taken from oven to pack.

If baking several individual dishes, place them on a metal cookie tray for ease of handling in and out of oven.

In place of newspaper for packing these and other hot dishes for picnics, use thick clean old bath towels.

To go with these two picnic dishes, make a salad of torn green leaf lettuce, sliced bananas, a few pieces of chopped date and pack it into a large bowl, or if everyone likes a separate combination, prepare a plastic container, putting a lid, for each.

Take the dressing separately because of the action of lemon juice (or vinegar) on the plastic during the hour or more before eating.

This is a cooked dressing with very low calorie count for each tablespoon. And it is equally good on vegetable and other salads as it is with fruit salad.

Cooked Low-fat Salad Dressing

1/2 cup powdered skim milk
1 tsp salt
1/2 tsp dry mustard
1/2 tsp sugar
2 tbsp unbleached flour
1 small egg
2 tbsp fresh lemon juice
1 cup water
1 tbsp soft margarine or oil
Into a small saucepan, measure and mix all ingredients except water and oil.

Buffet Quality Meatloaf

Mary Moore

When we produce dishes that are uncommonly good but call for common ground beef we have had a good day. But this Meat Roll has another divided — it slices beautifully cold. As a matter of fact, as I look at some perfect cold slices, I think it would be excellent for a buffet. So clip the recipe now and serve it hot but keep it in mind for summertime.

DOUBLE FEATURE (Ground Chuck) Meat Mixture

2 lbs. ground chuck beef
1 C. soft, fine bread crumbs
1 egg
1½ tsp. bottled onion flakes
(or minced raw onion)
1 tsp. salt
1½ tsp. pepper

Filling 1/2 of an 8-oz. pkg. (4 oz.)
fine (1/4) noodles
2 tbsp. flour
1/2 C. dairy sour cream
1 10-oz. can mushroom pieces, drained
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 C. sweet pickle relish about 7 to 8 minutes. Drain thoroughly. In a bowl combine thoroughly, cooked, drained noodles with remaining filling ingredients. Spread 1/2 cups of the noodle mixture evenly over surface of meat. (Reserve remaining noodle mixture and reheat at dinner time to serve with the meat.)

Roll meat up like a jelly-roll starting at narrow end. Place meat roll, seam side down, on a rack in a shallow baking pan. Brush entire surface with half of the chili sauce. Bake uncovered at 350 Deg. Fah. 1 hour. After 30 minutes remove meat from oven, brush with remaining half of chili sauce and return to oven for last 30 minutes. Slice with a very sharp knife. Don't forget to pass the reserved reheated noodle filling.

HOT FRUIT COMPOTE (Serves 10)

1 14-oz. can Bartlett pears
1 14-oz. can peach halves
1 14-oz. can plums
1/2 C. fresh frozen orange juice concentrate (undiluted)
1 stick cinnamon
2 seedless oranges, peeled and sectioned
1/2 tsp. almond flavoring
1/2 C. blanched almonds (optional)
2 oz. Kirsch (optional)

Drain the syrup from the canned fruits. Pit the plums. In a pot mix the peach and pear syrup with the orange juice concentrate and cinnamon stick. (Do not add the plum juice for it darkens the syrup and stains the pale pear halves. Use the plum juice for another purpose such as jello.)

Reserve the drained fruits.

Bring juices with cinnamon stick to boil, reduce heat and add the three fruits and simmer for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and add orange sections, almond extract, almonds and Kirsch (if used). Leave cinnamon stick in. Serve hot in China Nappies.

Ground chuck as meat roll can be served to guests

Selling Wine Takes Knowledge, Flair

By FRANK J. PRIAL

NEW YORK (NYT) — One day last spring, when the Bordeaux wine market was at its nadir, a well-known St. Emilion grower contemplated the cold rain pelting down on his vineyards thought of his bills and his unsold wine and said to a visitor: "Maybe Lichine has the answer."

It was a great tribute and an even greater irony. Once, Bordeaux's conservative wine people shuddered at the name of Alexis Lichine — the upstart, the stranger, the iconoclast who brushed aside the traditions of centuries. Why, he plastered his name-on billboards in the vineyards and he even wanted to junk the 1855 classification, the sacred listing of the top 62 chateaux in Bordeaux.

The cautious Bordelais never did pick up the custom of vineyard billboards, but they have accepted the first major change in the 1855 listing: putting Chateau Mouton-Rothschild among the first growths.

But they learned far more valuable things from Alexis Lichine: modern merchandising and the fact that the United States was a vast untapped market for wine. It was Lichine who, along with a handful of other early prophets, in the 1950s traveled tirelessly up and down America, laying the groundwork for the wine boom of the late 1960s.

But the boom had turned to bust by last April and, for all practical purposes, Alexis Lichine was not even in the wine business any more, which may come as a surprise to enthusiasts who have been drinking Alexis Lichine wines over the last five years.

He still owned Prieure-Lichine, his chateau near Margaux, but he had sold Alexis Lichine and Co. in 1968, to Bass Charrington, the giant British brewing concern. Under terms of the agreement, it got the exclusive use of the name for seven years.

That agreement ended in October. Lichine, who had helped start the biggest wine boom in modern times and then had to sit it out away from the business, quickly jumped back in.

When the boom turned to bust, many of the big companies that had thought wine meant quick profits back in the mid-1960s wanted to get out. Bass Charrington was one of them. Its interests in this country were picked up by Somerset Imports, an arm of Norton Simon Inc. Alexis Lichine came along as a consultant.

Now, at the age of 63, he is back on the road, where, he is convinced, any good salesman should be. "I feel 20 years younger," he said the other day. Just as there are immutable laws of nature, so are there immutable laws of social discourse and one of them is that Lichine will dominate any room he enters.

Alexis Lichine was born in Moscow, the son of a prosperous banker and lawyer. The family fled to New York in 1917, stayed for two years, then moved to Paris where they operated tour buses. Barely into his teens, Lichine became a tour director. He did well, and, as Joseph Wechsberg remarked of him many years later, realized for the first time "that words, used glibly enough, can be converted into money."

At about the same time, Lichine was beginning his lifelong affair with wine. He soon discovered that he had an extraordinary palate for tasting and understanding them. He came back to the United States, attended the University of Pennsylvania briefly, then returned to France. There, he became a prize advertising space salesman for the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune.

"Selling wine ads convinced me there was a future in the wine business in the United States," he recalled recently. He returned here shortly after repeal, but the business turned out to be tougher than he had anticipated and he became a clerk in a liquor store. Then he joined the late Frank Schoonmaker, the journalist who had become a wine entrepreneur.

After the war, Lichine resumed his peripatetic wine career, ranging up and down the land lecturing, cajoling and selling a few bottles wherever he could.

While Lichine the salesman was on the hustings in this country, Lichine the promoter was busy abroad. He lined up buckers and bought, first, vineyards in Burgundy, then two chateaux in Bordeaux — Prieure-Lichine in Cantenac, combes in Margaux, now owned by British interests.

He was among the first to recognize, in those postwar years, the coming popularity of the Caribbean and, when he was not selling wine to the few hotels in the islands, he was busy taking options on choice parcels of beachfront.

In his efforts to proselytize the grape, it was probably inevitable that Alexis Lichine would turn to the printed page, just as Frank Schoonmaker had done. His first book, "The Wines of France," appeared in 1951. Alexis Lichine's Encyclopedia of Wines and Spirits, originally due in 1959, was published in 1967 and revised in 1974.

In 1955, he founded Alexis Lichine and Company in Bordeaux to ship wines to Alexis Lichine and Company, his importing business in New York.

Last year, his seven years of exile over, Lichine went back into the commercial end of the wine business — with almost as much irony as he had left it. His old business had fallen on evil days. In part, he said, because of the general collapse of the wine business and in part because of the ineptitude of some of the people who had taken it over.

It was for sale and Norton Simon Industries bought it. Lichine was brought in as a consultant and as a director of Somerset Importers, the concern that handles Alexis Lichine wines here. Not only was he reunited with his old business, he was reunited, in a professional way, with his own name.

In the last few months, he has made two or three swings around this country, lecturing for three hours at a clip to retailers, wine enthusiasts, department store customers, to anyone in fact, who might possibly buy a bottle of wine.

HOW NEW CHEESE PREMIUM PLUS WAS BEGOTTEN.

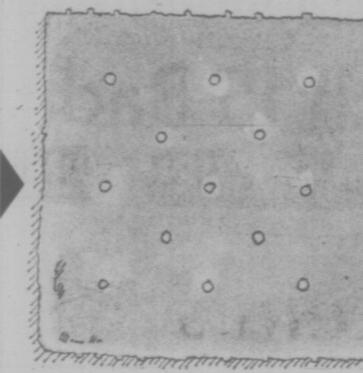

First, there was Premium Crackers by Christie. And for generations people loved them for their taste. For their crunch.

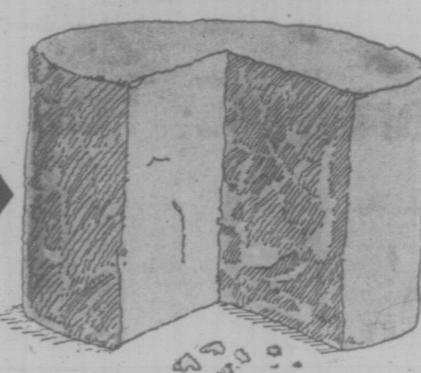

Then, as was fitting, the cracker evolved into a thinner, crunchier dimension.

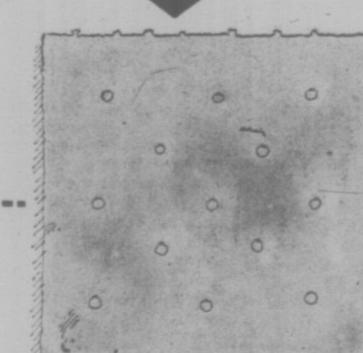

It was called Premium Plus Crackers by Christie. And soon people grew to love that cracker.

Then, because variety is the very spice of life, aged Canadian Cheddar cheese was added to the cracker.

Then to let the general public know that new Cheese Premium Plus Crackers are from the same family as regular Premium Plus Crackers, we packaged them in an identical box. Except for the colour and the word "Cheese". And this is a picture of the box.

And Christie called the new cracker, new Cheese Premium Plus Crackers.

Finally, to make sampling new Cheese Premium Plus Crackers even more tempting, we're giving away this 15¢ Off Coupon on any size package. Please tear it out. But try not to mess up the rest of the ad. Thank you.

Cheese Souffle

Frightened to try making a souffle?

There are stories about hostesses asking guests to tiptoe into the dining room so the souffle won't fall.

The souffle recipe below, developed by Kay Spicer, using imported Edam or Gouda cheese is almost foolproof and a good one for beginners to try. Kay reports that the test souffle was reheated several hours after photography and rose again to almost its original height.

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 1/2 cups shredded imported Holland Edam or Gouda
6 egg whites

1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
Shake or whisk milk and flour together to thoroughly blend. Cook, in saucepan over medium low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens.

Stir a small amount of the hot mixture into the beaten egg yolks; return yolk mixture to hot sauce; cook and stir two minutes longer. Blend in grated cheese; remove from heat. Stir until cheese melts.

Add cream of tartar to egg whites. Beat until whites form stiff peaks. Carefully fold cheese sauce into egg whites. Pour into ungreased 8 cup souffle dish. Stand in shallow pan of water.

Baked in preheated 325 Degree F oven for about 45 minutes until golden and firm to the touch. (Do not open oven until souffle has baked at least 30 minutes.) Make six servings.

Souffle: Always an elegant dish

Vitamin C: Too Much IS Bad

By RUTH FREMES
and
ZAK SABRY

There was a flurry of activity at the drug counters in the winter of 1970 when Linus Pauling published his best-seller, Vitamin C and the Common Cold.

That was the beginning of an epidemic of vitamin C pill-popping, when large doses of vitamin C replaced the dog as man's best friend and the cash registers across the country sang out in praise of vitamin C. Taking so much vitamin C was a new concept then, particularly if you consider that the recommended daily amount of vitamin C for Canadians is 30 milligrams—the amount in one small glass of orange juice in the morning or a tomato in a salad at night.

Five years have passed since Dr. Pauling's book appeared, five years of self diagnosis and treatment—and research studies into the effects of vitamin C in large doses on humans are beginning to be reported.

On the plus side, University of Toronto researchers found that taking more vitamin C during a cold keeps you feeling a bit better during the illness and may have you up and about sooner, but on the negative side, the research showed no effect when vitamin C in large doses was taken to prevent a cold.

There is much more to be said against taking large doses of vitamin C. Vitamin C is an acid and it is excreted in the urine. Extra amounts place a strain on the kidneys.

Also, the body adjusts to high vitamin C intakes to the point that if you miss taking a tablet after having had a high intake, deficiency signs may develop. Not the kind of signs that you would recognize, like a full blown case of scurvy, but your body's chemistry would take quite a beating. No one knows yet the eventual price you'd pay for such abuse. And high levels of vitamin C taken during pregnancy could be dangerous.

Researchers at Columbia University in New York postulated that infants born to mothers who take massive doses of vitamin C may be born with abnormally high needs for that vitamin. The researchers used guinea pigs and found that vitamin C requirements of the offspring were thousands of times C four times each day or higher than normal and as a result the baby guinea pig showed signs of scurvy and death occurred significantly earlier in the life cycle.

A word of caution, if you take vitamin C tablets to help shorten the life of a bad cold, the recommendation is: rest in bed, drink plenty of fluids, take 50 milligrams of vitamin and found that vitamin C requirements of the offspring were thousands of times C four times each day or higher than normal and as a result the baby guinea pig showed signs of scurvy and death occurred significantly earlier in the life cycle.

Smoked Picnic Is Ham Without the High Price

When one of my local stores recently had a special or-smoked picnic shoulder at $9 cents a pound, I bought my limit, because this is one of the most useful meat cuts around.

A fellow shopper, however, just stood there looking at them and then when she saw me piling them into my grocery cart said, "that's a nice price and I'm tempted, but they are so big, I wouldn't know what to do with them."

When I checked out some of my cookbooks, I found her problem. There's not too much written on the smoked picnic shoulder, while true hams get the red carpet treatment. In these days of high food prices that's wrong, because the real smoked picnic, in fact, is what you might call a shoulder 'ham,' yet always priced considerably lower.

The ham naturally is the main portion of the rear legs of hogs that has been well cured and smoked, and in some cases aged.

Every country has its own specialty hams such as England's famed York hams, and the superb aged Smithfield hams that come from an area of that name in Virginia. These are almost black on the outside, cost an arm and a leg, and are truly magnificent.

Then there are country hams which are smoked but seldom aged, and are still very expensive, but well worth the money when bought for some grand occasion. They are superb fare for a large buffet and are often displayed gloriously glazed and decorated.

The smoked picnic shoulder is like most country hams, except that coming from the frothy end of the hog, it contains an awkward-shaped bone, and at an average weight of, say, seven to eight pounds, is smaller. They are tough to carve into beautifully neat slices, but they taste every bit as good, and are one of the most economical buys since there is almost no waste to the dishes one can produce, including main course hot or cold ham, sandwiches, ham fillings, and even old style split pea soup.

Here's how I prepare one for a main-course meal:

Smoked picnic shoulders come wrapped and have a very thick skin, and I have found that to bring out the full flavor they need careful poaching as the preliminary step to baking. Lacking the dirt that gathers on the outside of the true aged hams, they need neither pre-soaking, nor scrubbing with soap and water. Incidentally to scrub an aged ham, use an unscented, non-detergent soap such as Ivory.

Leave the skin intact, but prick it all over with a sharp two-prong kitchen fork, place into a large pot, cover with cold water and bring the water to the boil, hold for five minutes, skim off any scum, then reduce the heat, cover and simmer for two hours. This is the timing for the whole picnic shoulder weighing roughly seven pounds and change.

At the end of two hours of but bare simmering, remove the pot from the heat and allow the ham to cool in the liquor.

When fairly cool remove to a platter, prick the skin again in five or six places and leave

Now take a sharp knife and remove all the skin, but not the fat layer. Place the ham skin up and using a thin, sharp knife carefully score the fat, no more than one-quarter inch deep in a diamond pattern, and stick whole cloves into the fat in a neat pattern, two or three diamond sections apart. Pop into a pre-heated oven set at 350 and during the one-hour baking period baste with syrup, from canned fruit, or from a jar of sweet pickled fruit such as peaches or watermelon pickle.

This not only produces a pleasant glaze to the ham, but adds a most distinctive flavor. Use the fruit from the can for something else, because this is not the standard style heavily glazed ham that you see in specialty meat counters.

Bring the ham hot to the table, slice carefully each side of the bone and serve with your choice of potatoes, green vegetables and with mustard pickles, sweet dills, watermelon pickle, sweet chutney and so on. Cooked as above, you will be really surprised at the truly delicious flavor. And there will be lots of ham for leftovers. Here are just a few.

Cut thick slices and grill or sautee for a fine dish of ham and eggs.

Cook the eggs in a separate pan, but pour the ham gravy over the ham slice.

Cook ends of ham add to cooked rice and use as stuffing in cabbage rolls, or use as stuffing for baked green peppers.

Add one cup chopped ham to six lightly beaten eggs and seasoning and scramble.

Cook and season ham, lightly saute with a small can of baby shrimps and use as filling for crepes and mask with your choice of piquant sauce; a curry sauce in a great treat.

Save the bone, wrap and freeze and use later to produce a pot of pea or lentil soup.

Take 12 cups of the liquor in which the ham poached, add one pound split peas or lentils, one chopped onion, one carrot and two stalks of celery, all chopped, bring to the boil, remove from the heat for one hour, then simmer until the legumes puree. Remove the bone, run through the blender and reheat with diced ham added for a hearty luncheon or dinner soup.

IT'S NOT THE REAL THING

MOSCOW (UPI) — Scientists at a Moscow laboratory have come up with artificial caviar which tastes just like the real thing, the newspaper Moskovskaya Pravda said today.

After a trial sale, described as highly successful, the scientists now are prepared to produce up to 400 pounds of artificial caviar every day, the newspaper reported.

The ingredients — milk albumen, casein, oils, fish fats, salt and water — are passed through various baths until the "caviar" jells into tiny drops.

The Soviet Union has a severe shortage of real caviar because the Caspian Sea, home of the sturgeon from which the best eggs come, is so badly polluted.

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:
I have two "String of Pearls" which I bought at a very good nursery and paid a lot of money for. They are in hanging baskets 6 inches in diameter. The problem is that all the "pearls" at the end of the strings are turning black and dying off, but it has grown a lot of new shoots on top. Can you help me find the answer? I love this plant because it isn't too bushy and I don't have much room.—Mrs. R.B.

Dear Mrs. R.B.:
Unlike their oyster-produced namesakes, black pearls are not at all desirable on the Seneca, or String of Pearls. However — and we hope you can take some heart from this — they're not uncommon when the plant is cultivated indoors without the benefit of special grow-lights.

Frankly, much like Donkey's Tails or String of Hearts, the most impressive specimens of String of Pearls we've seen have been those that are grown either in greenhouses or outside under shaded lath.

However, if you keep your plant inside near a bright window but out of direct sun, do not over water (this is a succulent variety and will store water for a good length of time) and keep trimming back the ends of the strings, you just might find yourself with a lovely, bushy string of pearls indoors. Something to wear with basic green.

'Kill! Kill! Kill!'... And Marines Battered Trainee

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A mentally handicapped U.S. Marine begged for mercy and tried to run away several times as one Marine after another clubbed him under the guidance of the drill instructor who shouted, "Kill! Kill! Kill!" according to taped interviews released Tuesday.

The victim — Marine Pvt. Lynn E. McClure, 20 — was finally knocked unconscious at the San Diego Marine base and died 13 weeks later without ever regaining consciousness.

"We were like animals," said one of the Marines who believes he struck the final blow against McClure during training at the base on Dec. 6, 1975.

"All I can hear," said the Marine in describing to a private investigator why he has not slept peacefully since the McClure beating, "is his screaming for us to stop and asking for the mercy of God."

John W. Gyorkos, an Ocean-side, Calif., lawyer the McClure family has retained in a $3.5 million suit against the Marine Corps, released the tapes but would not divulge the names of the Marines interviewed. A Washington Post reporter heard one tape and was read the transcript of another.

The transcribed interviews and the law firm's chief investigator, Irving Richards, allege that an exhausted and reluctant McClure — who was 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighed 115 pounds — was ordered to fight one Marine after another until he dropped unconscious in the dirt.

The Marine who described himself as McClure's best friend gave this account:

"Some of the guys were passed out" from doing so many pushups while in a special platoon but the drill instructor ordered them to do stick fighting.

"At first he (McClure) wouldn't fight ... The DI (drill instructor) made him ... He was yelling at the colored guy and telling him to hit McClure ... He kept on doing it and pretty soon McClure started crying and laying on the ground. Then he tried to take off running.

"They would catch him and bring him back in there. Pretty soon it just seemed they were doing it for pleasure." McClure was told to pick out somebody to fight and pointed to his best friend — the Marine who made the statement to McClure's family investigators.

"I said, 'I don't want to fight you.' The DI said that if you two guys do not put forth effort, I am going to have these other two guys come out and just beat the hell out of you. These other guys were pretty good size."

"So we go out there, and I

Dynamite To Premier

QUEBEC (CP) — A stick of dynamite was found last Thursday in a parcel addressed to Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, a Quebec provincial police spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said a blasting cap was attached to the dynamite stick, which was encased in lead paper. It was not known whether the stick would have exploded.

The parcel had been mailed last Wednesday in St. Georges de Beaucage, 50 miles south of Quebec City, he said. The dynamite was discovered by a mail inspector in the government's mail department.

was trying to take it easy with him. And all of a sudden he took off again. They caught him and brought him back and the DI fought McClure to send in the toughest moves. Then another Marine fought McClure," continued his best friend, "and was really beating the hell out of him. . . . The DI was telling him, 'Kill him.' He was saying, 'Kill! Kill! Kill!'"

Then another sergeant came to the scene and told the DI watching the McClure fight to send in the toughest but not biggest, man in the group against McClure — a recruit weighing 190 pounds, according to private investigator Richards.

McClure "fought him a couple of times," McClure's friend continued. The 190-pounder, according to Richards, swung so hard at McClure once that the padded end of the pugil stick knocked a board out of the nearby fence.

"All the time he (McClure) was crying and yelling. 'Please don't hurt me!'" His friend said in the recorded statement. "He started yelling, 'My neck! My neck!'"

The DI said "s—t" and put the biggest guy in the group up against McClure.

The big Marine has one of

ment to the private investigators. His voice broke at times as he gave this account of the McClure beating:

"We were like animals and there was no fairness about it whatsoever. I think if they're

fighting they should try to match up" by size. "One half-

to fight McClure.

"He was screaming. 'God

no. Please! What did I do? It was cruel . . . The DI didn't have to let us fight that long it . . . He could have stopped it . . ."

The big Marine—who said on the tape that he wants to tell the Corps what actually happened to McClure and will do so anyway he can—believes he delivered the fatal blow to McClure, a blow to the right side of the recruit's head.

"All I can see at night when I go to bed," he said in breaking voice. "There's no going to sleep. All I can hear is his screaming up to stop and asking for the mercy of God. I need help to forget it . . . It turns my world upside down."

Both of the Marines who gave statements about McClure's beating have since left the Corps at their request, according to Richards.

Ford Given Tax Refund

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Ford, after paying 42 per cent of his 1975 income in taxes, has received a federal income tax refund of $11,631.

The White House released the figures Tuesday showing that Ford's 1975 gross income was $251,991. His federal taxes were $94,568 and his state and local taxes $11,941.

Ford got the refund as a result of having $106,200 withheld during the year from his pay cheque. However, press secretary Ron Nessen said the amounts withheld for local taxes and Michigan taxes were short by "several hundred dollars."

Ford's $251,991 gross income included $200,000 in salary, $50,000 in presidential expenses, and $1,991 in earnings

Nessen said Ford didn't have to pay taxes on $23,000 he listed as business expenses, primarily from the cost of buying and mailing Christmas cards, but paid taxes on the remaining $27,000 of his expense fund.

labor governor," said James Mahoney, executive vice-president of the state AFL-CIO and a leading member of the labor-for-Jackson group. "Carter has not been a friend to labor."

The labor-for-Jackson committee has the blessing of I.W. Abel, president of the powerful Steelworkers Union, who sent a telephone message that was read by a regional officer of the union at a news conference Tuesday evening.

The message was: "He stands behind you 100 per cent," the regional officer, Hugh Carcella, said to Jackson.

The labor leaders vigorously denied they were backing Jackson and trying to stop Carter with the ultimate aim of winning the Democratic nomination for Sen. Hubert

Humphrey. The Pennsylvania labor chieftains have long been warm friends of Humphrey but Mahoney said at the news conference, "Nobody is more qualified than Sen. Jackson."

But confident Carter has launched an all-out drive to win the state's primary, a test he says may offer his opponents "their last chance to stop me" from nailing down the nomination.

Bolstered by an infusion of campaign funds and a successful 24-hour swing through Louisiana and Texas, Carter came here Tuesday afternoon expressing confidence he is ahead in the Pennsylvania popularity poll.

While conceding "our support is soft," he said he hopes to use the next seven days to rally what he called "fightin'" effort by backers of active rivals Jackson and Norris Udall and his undeclared challenger, Humphrey, to stop him here.

Except for brief fund-raising tries to Tennessee on Friday and Connecticut on Monday, Carter will spend all his working hours in the next week in Pennsylvania.

In aiming for a knockout over Jackson and Udall impressive enough to slow Humphrey's increasingly public move toward an active candidacy, Carter is taking a calculated risk.

He will spend only one more day in Texas and none in Louisiana, even though the 171 delegates to be chosen in those two states are only seven fewer than the bloc available in Pennsylvania.

Quake For L.A. 'In Year'

PASADENA (UPI) — State disaster officials today studied a forecast by a seismologist, using newly developed earthquake prediction techniques, that a major earthquake may strike the Los Angeles area "within a year."

Dr. James H. Whitcomb of Caltech said Tuesday that seismological readings indicate "an earthquake somewhere between magnitude 5.5 and 6.5 (on the Richter scale) may occur within a year with an epicenter near that of the 1971 San Fernando tremor."

That quake, centred in the northern suburbs of Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley, registered 6.5 and killed 65 persons, doing $500 million damage.

Whitcomb said pinpointing the time and epicenter of the quake is impossible, given the current state of the infant science of earthquake prediction. But he said the readings apply to an irregular circle of 83 square miles that covers most of the Los Angeles area, from Santa Monica Bay to the Mojave desert and south through Hollywood, Beverly Hills and the central part of the city.

The affected area has a population of more than 6 million.

There are at least 20 active earthquake faults in the zone, Whitcomb said, and the quake could occur along any of them. The faults are connected to the San Andreas fault, a division in the earth's crust that splits California from the Mexican border to the point north of San Francisco where it runs out to sea and is the source of most of the state's destructive temblors.

Whitcomb's report was submitted to the California earthquake prediction evaluation council, which advised the state office of emergency preparedness. Emergency regulation director Charles Standard said copies were sent to 112 members of the council, which will meet in October to "analyze in full measure."

Whitcomb predicted an earthquake in the Riverside area in 1974 of a magnitude 5. It occurred as forecast, registering a magnitude 4. Russian seismologists have used the same technique to forecast quakes in their country and Columbia University scientists used it to successfully predict a small tremor in the Adirondack Mountains of New York State.

Angola Rebels Fight for Food

By CARYLE MURPHY
Washington Post

LUANDA, Angola — Forces of the new Angolan government and their Cuban supporters are facing increased guerrilla activity in Cabinda, Angola's northern enclave, according to reports from local residents.

The increased attacks on troops and civilians come a few weeks after Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko promised Angola's President Agostinho Neto that he would no longer permit the "separatist Front for the Liberation of the Enclave of Cabinda" to use Zaire as a base.

Cabinda's military commander, a Commandant Pedale, said that shortly after this agreement, Zaire forced the guerrillas back to the border with Cabinda. He said the rebels are now attacking civilians to get food.

Another military source said an attack last week by the Cabinda Front left about 20 civilians dead in a Cabindan village.

There also have been recurring reports of ambushes against troops of the ruling Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola and their Cuban allies along the northern coastal road.

No incidents have been reported in the enclave's capital city, but white-helmeted Popular Movement military police and Cuban soldiers are much in evidence.

Meanwhile, the first American has returned to Gulf Oil Co. installations in Cabinda.

Operations were shut down last December during fighting by three rival factions for control of this former Portuguese colony. Sydney J. Anderson was assigned to get production started again at the company's more than 140 offshore oil wells.

Local technicians said they could not give an accurate estimate of how many weeks it would take to repair the equipment and restore production to its former level of 150,000 barrels a day.

In a speech to Cabinda residents this week, Commandant Pedale appealed to those who still oppose the new government or who had fled into Zaire to return and surrender. He said those who give up will face no reprisals, but those who continue to resist "will be punished and will not be pardoned."

He asked the populace to help detect the "bands which are creating the climate of instability" in Cabinda.

The district is in the most tropical region of Angola, and, as in Vietnam, thick jungles create a hospitable terrain for guerrillas.

Cabindans also feel strongly that they are different from

Soviet armored cars used by the Cuban and government troops are easy targets for the rebels.

A heavy concentration of Cubans has been stationed in Cabinda ever since Cuba sent troops to Angola because of the Cabindan separatist threat. Commandant Pedale said that separatist forces led by mercenaries and using armored cars tried to take over the enclave a few days before Angola became independent in November, but were pushed back. He added that he knew of no mercenaries fighting with the Cabinda Front now.

Angolans are suspicious because the increased guerrilla activity proves that Mobutu has not kept his word and that the Cabinda Front continues to receive logistical and material support from Zaire.

Two weeks ago, when a Zairian delegation visited Luanda, Angola repeated its demand that Zaire not help the separatists. But Mobutu told reporters in Paris that Zaire was respecting the terms of the non-intervention agreement he and Neto had signed.

Other observers speculate that guerrilla activity may have been stepped-up because the Cabinda Front feels desperate with its outside support cut off. These observers believe the rebels may be making a final move for control of the enclave, using arms they have been storing there over the past few years.

Most African observers believe the Cabinda Front is too splintered to govern the enclave effectively if it should win independence.

The B.C. Raspberry Growers Association will apply to the federal stabilization board for a grant, Jack Wessel, manager of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, said Tuesday.

Wessel noted that B.C. growers — who produce more than 90 per cent of the Canadian supply — earned only 22 cents a pound last year after a price of 46 cents a pound in 1973.

The association is a member of the federation.

The shooting followed a series of extremist arson attacks on business premises in various parts of Italy. Arsonists torched the Florence office of America's Texaco Oil Company last week and three times set fire to the Fiat auto works in Turin.

Theodoli, a Roman nobleman, serves as president of the Italian subsidiary of the Chevron Oil Company and as president of the Union of Italian Oil Companies.

Police said three or four young men jumped Theodoli at a busy street corner, firing several pistol shots at the executive as he waited in his car for a traffic jam to thin out.

Jamieson Mum On 'Deal' Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Don Jamieson's office has refused to name companies in Canada in line to receive $580 million in business from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. because of fears a deal to purchase 18 Orion patrol aircraft from Lockheed might not go through.

The industrial benefits proposals — whereby Lockheed agrees to have much of the work done in Canada — have been a much-touted part of the $350-million program to replace the aging Argus aircraft with a more sophisticated long-range patrol aircraft from Lockheed.

Jamieson previously told reporters that a list of 25 companies scheduled to get business as part of the deal was available in his office.

But an aide in his office said it is a confidential cabinet document, adding release of the list "would be embarrassing to these companies if the deal doesn't go through."

George Kalember, head of the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of Canada, also declined to release details of agreements with Canadian firms.

Five months ago, the company issued a news release which said it would provide business to more than 90 firms in six provinces, resulting in 6,000 jobs for Canadians.

Doubts about whether the deal would go through were raised more than a month ago when Lockheed was accused of renegeing on a promise to provide interim financing until the first plane was delivered in two years.

The scandal-plagued and financially-troubled company had reached the limit on its borrowing powers imposed by the U.S. government and since that time the federal government has been seeking the money from Canadian banks.

A decision on financing could be made this week and must be made by the end of this month.

The largest part of Lockheed's industrial expenditure in Canada would go to Canadair, a Lockheed statement said in November.

Lockheed would provide tooling and would train Canadair workers to produce portions of the wings not only on the 18 Orions Canada would buy but also for a minimum of 150 aircraft to be sold to the United States Navy and others. This portion is valued at $228 million.

Litton Systems Ltd., of Canada, a subsidiary of the American firm, another company named in the release, would receive a $30-million contract for the integration of the aircraft's two ground-based computer centres.

CAE Montreal would receive contracts valued at $30 million to construct two flight simulators and submarine detection equipment for LRFA.

How the remainder of the $380 million in industrial benefits would be distributed is less clear.

The Lockheed release said Canadian Marconi, Bristol Aerospace, Northwest Industries, a subsidiary of CAE Montreal, I.M.P. Aerospace and Hermes would receive Lockheed contracts.

He admitted he was on the list until November, 1974, when he was elected party president and decided to accept no more government work.

Quebec public accounts for the 1974-75 fiscal year show Desrosiers was paid at least $33,350 in professional fees by the provincial government. The previous year, the government paid him about $46,000.

Julien Mackay, president of the Chamber of Notaries, said that similar lists have existed since the days of Louis Taschereau, Quebec premier between 1920 and 1936.

The lists change according to the party in power, he said.

Nothing Wrong With Patronage — Top Que. Grit

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government keeps a patronage list of about a third of the province's 1,500 notaries from which to choose its legal representatives, the president of the Liberal Party of Quebec said Tuesday.

Claude Desrosiers, a notary himself, told a news conference notaries are recommended for inclusion on the list by national assembly members and civil servants.

Desrosiers said he sees nothing wrong with using a patronage list as long as public funds are not abused.

Compilation of the list was recommended by a group of justice department civil servants after the Liberal party came to power in 1970.

Result of This Appeal Could Hit All of Us

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will be asked next Tuesday to hear an appeal that lawyers say might have far-reaching consequences for every Cana-

The case involves Diane Teno, of Windsor, who suffered severe brain damage when struck by a car near her home July 1, 1969.

She was awarded $350,000 damages by the Ontario Supreme Court.

The Teno girl, now 11 and still physically and mentally handicapped, was leaving an ice cream truck when she was hit by a car.

Doctors have said the girl never will be able to work, marry or look after herself because she cannot control her arms and walks and speaks with difficulty.

The Ontario Supreme Court ordered the driver of the car, the ice cream truck driver and the company which owns the truck each to pay one-third of the $350,000.

But the Ontario appeal court reduced this to $875,000 and ordered that Yvonne Teno, the girl's mother, pay 25 per cent — more than $200,000 — for negligence in not keeping her off the street.

All four parties have filed for permission to appeal.

If the court decides to hear the appeal, it will have to decide at least two points that will have an effect on motorists and parents.

First, lawyers for the car driver say the award of $875,000 still is excessive and contemplates that the girl will live in her own privately-owned, privately-staffed nursing clinic for the rest of her life.

They say she should receive an annual payment large enough to look after her needs, not a huge sum that will have an effect on motorists and parents.

Second is the question of whether parents should be forced to pay damages to their children in cases of negligence.

One Ottawa insurance agent says householder's insurance does not cover Mrs. Teno, while a lawyer who knows the case says the Teno family house insurance will pay only $25,000 of the $218,000 she has been ordered to pay.

The entire $875,000 was awarded to the child. The parents were awarded about $14,000 for expenses and compensation.

Teachers Delay Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — A strategy committee of the 180,000-member common front of public service employees has recommended that no strike action be undertaken until at least Friday in the contract dispute with the province, a union official said Tuesday.

The front, which includes the province's teachers and non-medical hospital employees, had been expected to order a 24-hour walkout for today.

But the union official said the decision was to postpone action, in part to allow all workers to complete Easter vacations.

The decision was subject to ratification by the liaison committee of the front Tuesday night, but the union source said that body was not likely to overrule the strategy committee decision.

The Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers had been among the groups advocating a walkout today, but most of its membership is on Easter vacation for the balance of the week.

200-MILE MOVE 'SHEER NONSENSE'

OTTAWA (FP) — Federal fisheries officials are dismissing as "sheer nonsense" a report from Newfoundland that Canada will declare a 200-mile offshore limit next January if the current Law of the Sea talks in New York break down.

stocks surplus to Canadian requirements.

The essence of any agreement, however, would be that catches must be limited to facilitate sustainable yields.

The Newfoundland report, in a St. John's newspaper, quoted an Ottawa spokesman as having volunteered the January deadline for international consensus.

One senior fisheries department official said Tuesday that for Canada to state any kind of ultimatum could weaken irreparably any bargaining power Canada has in New York. Another simply said "that report's sheer nonsense."

HONORARY DEGREES

Three honorary law degrees will be conferred at University of Victoria's annual convocation May 29 when about 850 graduates and undergraduates are awarded degrees.

Honorary degrees will be presented to Dr. Donald Hebb, former chancellor of McGill University, Dr. Margaret Ormsby who taught history at University of B.C. from 1943 to 1974 and Dr. Eugene Vinaver of France, and internationally-known scholar in English who taught at UVic from 1972 to 1975.

Tax Penalty Increase Urged

Penalties which B.C. municipalities are allowed to charge for unpaid property taxes should be increased to bring them more in line with current lending rates, Victoria city council believes.

A city resolution urging an increase in the permissible penalty from eight per cent to 12 per cent will be forwarded to next month's meeting in Campbell River of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities.

If adopted at that meeting, it will be submitted to the annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities in September.

In agreeing on the resolution's wording Tuesday, council said the penalty level should be reviewed annually by the provincial government to reflect fluctuating commercial interest rates.

Chew Presents Lowest Tender

DUNCAN — Chew Excavation Ltd. of Victoria submitted a tender of $887,484 — the lowest on the first stage of the sewage collection system in the Eagle Heights area.

A spokesman for the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, which is supervising the project, said four other companies submitted bids. The second lowest came from the Globe Excavating Ltd. of Vancouver with $722,422.

The contract will be awarded at the regional board meeting April 28.

Accused Rapist 'Impaired'

Two policemen told B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday a man accused of rape was impaired when they met him in the Regency Hotel, 724 Yates, in the early morning of Feb. 18.

Const. William Bridgewood and Det. Const. Fred Mills of Victoria police were testifying at the trial of William Robert Robinson, 54, of 724 Yates, accused of raping a 54-year-old woman Feb. 18.

Bridgewood told Mr. Justice John Gould and a jury of 10 men and two women he met the complainant in the hotel lobby who was "upset, crying" with scratches on her face.

He identified Robinson in court as the man he saw walking in the corridor of the third floor who said his name was William Anderson but who produced identification in the name of William Robinson.

Cross-examined by defence counsel George Jones, he said Robinson had been drinking. "I would say he was impaired," from the way he was talking and the smell of liquor on his breath.

Mills said the complainant was "crying, close to being hysterical" with some red marks and bruising about her face.

In cross-examination, he said Robinson was impaired but not intoxicated.

Dr. Larry Smith, who examined the woman in hospital, said she had an abrasion on her lip and two bruises on her arm. The facial marks and one bruise were new, he said.

He agreed in cross-examination that he told the preliminary hearing she was "quite calm" at the examination, also in the early hours of Feb. 18.

The trial continued today. The Crown's case is being presented by Nicholas Lang, assisted by Rick Bennett. Jones is being assisted in the defence by Nicholas Lott.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An echo of a major 1975 Victoria news story was heard Tuesday in Victoria provincial court when Judge Douglas Campbell ended a preliminary hearing by ordering a higher-court trial for a 24-year-old Victoria man.

Campbell made his ruling after a preliminary hearing of a charge that Rodney Trevor Johnson was "unlawfully an accessory" to Daniel Bradley Cain escaping lawful custody at Wilkinson Road jail.

Campbell also ordered a higher-court trial following a preliminary hearing of a joint Saanich charge of robbery with violence against three men arrested after an incident Feb. 24 at Douglas and Burnside.

The three men were Robert Joseph Gelmeau, 24, of 742 Lampson; James Jackson, 28, no fixed address, and Norman Claude Vandal, 23, of 649 Manchester.

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a Victoria fisherman was cleared when the judge dismissed a two count charge of dangerous operation of a vessel and mischief.

The charge against Mirko Cigic, 43, of 429 Springfield, had been laid after a second fisherman complained to authorities about a two-vessel collision Oct. 6, 1975, in Juan de Fuca Strait half a mile off Sheringham Point.

Alder set Sept. 16 as the date for a preliminary hearing of a charge against Frank Albrecht Wagner, 21, of 2220 Cadboro Bay, of possession of heroin Dec. 29, 1975, in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking. Wagner previously had chosen trial in a higher court.

In traffic court, Frank Andrew Hanson, 61, of 2323 Dowler, pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving April 11 in Saanich and was sentenced by Judge William Ostler to a 20-day jail term and a six-month driving ban.

Drink-and-drive fines Tuesday were led by a total penalty of $450 for Victor Melville Smith, 42, of 2990 Esplanade, found guilty after a trial on a Victoria charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test, Dec. 12, 1975.

Fined $350 each after pleading guilty to separate Victoria charges of impaired driving April 11 or 12 were Paul Cooper, 30, of 2958 Irma; Douglas Arthur Phillips, 19, of 978 Ambassador, and Theodore Leslie Schultz, 29, of 822 Leslie.

Geraldo Christopher Martino, 33, of 622 Raynor, was fined $300 following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of being impaired while in care or control of a vehicle June 20, 1975.

FOURTH SECTION

UVic Is Country Cousin At Budget Time: Board

University of Victoria would appreciate a few more friends in high places.

Board of governors voted Tuesday to ask Education Minister Pat McGeer to consider appointing Vancouver Islanders to fill vacancies on the Universities Council of B.C.

"It's pretty obvious that we need some stronger representation on the council from this area," said UVic president Dr. Howard Petch, who has been negotiating with the council over budget allocations.

Board chairman Joseph Cunliffe agreed. After budget negotiations, he said, "I couldn't help get the feeling that University of B.C. gets the best kick at the cat because they're over there (on the Mainland)."

"That's not necessarily true of course," Cunliffe hastened to add.

The council is the intermediary body which takes the total amount of money available for universities and divides it between the province's three campuses.

The government has already given them the total to work with and negotiations between the council and the three university administrations have already begun, but the total budget has not been released.

Although board member Larry Ryan said UVic's plea to McGeer "may introduce too much parochialism into the system," board members passed the motion by a vote of 6 to 4.

Bastion Theatre has earned 49 per cent of its total revenue this year and thus comes within a whisker of Canada Council's 50 per cent benchmark for theatre companies.

"That puts us among the leaders in Canada in that category," says administrator Allen Houghton.

With its most successful season ever tucked away in the record books, Bastion directors and staff are turning attention to launching a three-year program which they hope will end in the company becoming self-supporting.

For the first time Bastion is seeking contributions from the community at large. In setting its capital fund drive sights on a total of $150,000, mostly in the form of pledges over the next three years, first priority is retirement of a bank loan and other private loans that bridged the lean years of initial growth. Houghton calls them "start-up costs."

Bastion's recent application to the city for a special grant of $50,000 toward the fund-raising campaign, was turned down by council. But Bastion officers are philosophical and grateful for the municipal help they have received up to now.

The city has been generous, feels Houghton, especially in making a supplemental grant in lieu of McPherson rentals.

Artistic director Edwin Stephenson thinks the time is right for asking Victoria citizens to help liquidate the loans.

"I feel we've reached saturation as far as our subscription list is concerned," he says. "We're not likely to expand much beyond the 4,800 subscribers we had this season."

"And we're not just sitting around waiting for funds to roll in," Houghton points out.

Sponsors were found for all but one of this season's plays and programs were sold instead of being given away. And to keep pace with rising costs, ticket prices will be somewhat higher next season.

The subscriber list amounts to around three per cent of the Greater Victoria population — Canada Council considers two per cent a desirable mark. But Bastion has other figures to rally confidence.

Mainstage productions at McPherson were attended by 40,000 people; five children's productions were seen by 7,500 youngsters and 60,000 school children throughout the province saw 175 performances by the youth touring group.

Fund campaign brochures stress the thought that Bastion is good business for Victoria. Its budget for 1976-77, most of which will be spent in the city, is more than a half million dollars.

Much of this amount is brought in as senior level government grants thus injecting new money into the economy through local expenditures such as purchase of supplies and payroll for a resident staff of 150 people.

Houghton figures more than $200,000 was circulated in Victoria last season, probably even more will make the rounds next year.

Just what plays Victorians will be seeing is uncertain at the moment as Ed Stephenson is still wrestling with choices that will provide a balanced season and stay within budget limits.

In his high-ceilinged, bright office in Bastion's new quarters in the Malahat Building looking over the harbor, Stephenson waves his hands at his cluttered desk.

"We've got to have something really smashing to sell when the big push comes in September," he says. "If we're going to equal our subscription record. There's usually anything up to a 50 per cent mortality rate with audiences."

"Why? Because people leave town, have babies, switch jobs or get involved with other evening activities — all things that alter theatre-going habits. We've got to be prepared and able to fill the gaps."

We took a long hard look at Vancouver hotels and created the Four Seasons.

The Four Seasons Vancouver is quite unlike the other great hotels of the city. The difference is service. You'll begin to experience it the moment you arrive.

Because we've taken the time to fly over our senior doorman from the Inn on the Park, London, England, just to train our doorman for Vancouver.

It's that kind of special effort that will make you appreciate the Four Seasons way of doing things.

Refreshments, light lunches, quiet piano amidst soaring tropical plants.

The perfect place to begin a special evening. Imagine if you will a cathedral ceiling skylight, letting in the sun by day and the stars by night. All surrounded by a lavish collection of exotic plants. As a beginning or ending, a beautiful place to meet.

Garden Lounge

We found a chef who does marvellous things to an egg.

Forget everything you know about hotel coffee shops. For The Harvester is a fine restaurant all on its own.

Whether you're ready for a light pastry and coffee, Eggs Benedict or an airy crêpe, this room has a feeling that families will love.

And a view of the Court House Gardens to complete a relaxed mood.

Your memories after dining and dancing will include such delights as Scampi in Love and a chef who visits your table.

And no wonder he does. For in his career as a French chef he has been lavishly applauded for his haute cuisine.

He and his people will bring to Le Pavillon the practiced art of French service and prepare at your table dishes like Chicken à la Catherine de Rohan and Lichees in Pernod.

And for your eyes and ears, a magnificent setting for dancing to an orchestra and vocalist.

Le Pavillon can best be described as continuing the envied tradition of Four Seasons dining around the world.

We're so proud of our steaks, we broil them before your very eyes.

There is no less art to grilling a New York Sirloin to perfection than there is to preparing a fine wine sauce.

The Grill Room was created on that principle. The best of steaks, chops, ribs, roasts and fish that can be had in the city.

And all lovingly prepared on an open charcoal grill in the midst of the room.

Not to mention 430 rooms. All with a view.

Is it not the mark of a fine hotel to make you feel comfortably welcome? That's what our rooms and suites are all about.

To relax you further, we've an indoor/outdoor pool surrounded by lush gardens, badminton court, saunas, whirlpool and exercise room. The Four Seasons is all this and more. But to truly appreciate what makes us different, you must come stay with us.

'Lived Alone and Paid Price'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 78-year-old man whose body was found Monday in a boarded-up house in the southeastern part of the city died 18 months ago, the coroner's office said.

Police said the skeleton of John B. Vickers was found under a makeshift hut of boards and mattresses in the front room of an old, single-level house. The skeleton was found by some children who broke into the house.

Homicide detective Bob Desmarais said: "He had some food under there and a small electric hotplate."

"It looked like he made a cave for himself and lived in it," the detective said. "It was his right to live alone, to be without friends. But he paid the price for it."

Mary Kucharnok, who lived next door to Vickers, said she called the police in March, 1975, after she hadn't seen any lights in the place for several months.

The police came, she said, went in the back door and came out a few minutes later and said the house was vacant.

Apparently nobody in the area knew anything about him.

In the accumulated mail, police found a tax demand from the city of Vancouver for $500.00 three years of unpaid taxes. There was a July, 1975, B.C. Hydro notice of cutoff of service for an unpaid bill of $14.89.

Police said the only thing they knew about the man was that he emigrated from Britain in 1949, according to a passport they found.

HANDCUFFED MINE GUARD A HOAX

KAMLOOPS (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday that an Alton Mines Ltd. security guard's claim that he was handcuffed and tied up at the mine site near here Sunday by two masked men was a hoax.

The guard will be charged with public mischief, police said. His name has not yet been released.

The guard said at least two men, protesting the Alton smelter development and wearing ski masks, overpowered him from behind, blindfolded and handcuffed him. Later, a man telephoned a local radio newsman and said the "incident was in protest over the Alton development."

Ministers to Probe Claim to Island

KELOWNA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday two cabinet ministers will investigate a claim by Eddy Haymour that he was cheated out of an island in Okanagan Lake by local officials and the British Columbia government.

Haymour was found not guilty by reason of insanity on a charge of possessing a dangerous weapon and sent to Riverview Mental Hospital in 1974. He was released in September, 1975.

He said that during his stay in the institution he sold Ogo-pogo Island in Okanagan Lake for $40,000.

He had planned to use the 4.8-acre island as an Arabian-style resort with belly dancers and Arab shows, but local officials said the project would be a health hazard.

Haymour said the island now is worth $300,000.

He said that if the provincial government thought he was insane, and therefore not responsible for his actions, it should not have bought the island.

TOWN'S ODOROUS DECISION

OKANAGAN FALLS (CP) — Residents of this town 10 miles south of Penticton said Tuesday that a proposed feed lot and packing plant's economic benefits would be outweighed by its odor.

The concern by residents was expressed at a public hearing to consider an application by Southern Interior Beef Corp. to build the lot and plant on the outskirts of the town.

Ranchers in support of the development said it would be a natural extension of the stockyard and shipping centre that had been here for more than 30 years.

They said it would create 15 jobs in the first year and 30 jobs at the end of three years, with a payroll increasing to $500,000 after three years from $300,000 the first year.

Residents of this town of 1,200 said the odor and noise from the development would drive away tourists.

The objectors doubted earlier reports by the developer that prevailing wind would assure little or no odor from the plant and feed lot.

The decision on the development application was reached at the meeting, but one might be reached Thursday at the regular meeting of the Okanagan-Similkameen regional district.

No Blame in Death

POR ALBERT (CP) — A coroner's jury attached no blame Tuesday in the death of a 14-year-old girl struck by a police car March 19.

The six-man jury found that Wendy Jensen of Port Alberni died from extensive head injuries suffered in the accident.

Poor lighting at the intersection where the girl was hit and poor weather conditions contributed to the death, the jury found.

Jensen died March 20 in a Victoria hospital.

Upgrading Begins

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Canadian National Railways engineering crews have begun work on a $13 million upgrading of the railway's north line between Red Pass Junction Tuesday. He was assigned to patrol duties in southwest Vancouver.

and Prince Rupert. A company release Tuesday said the various track improvement projects to be carried out over the next six months are a continuation of the railway's long-range line-upgrading program.

Back on the Beat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver police constable Richard Musgrave, who was found not guilty of murder punishable by life imprisonment last week by a Supreme Court of British Columbia jury, resumed full duty with the force Tuesday. He was assigned to patrol duties in southwest Vancouver.

COUNCIL BACKTRACKS ON SIDEWALK BISTROS

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Sidewalk cafeterias will be allowed on the Government Street Mall after all, Victoria city council indicated Tuesday.

But before individual applications are considered the city will develop an over-all policy to regulate this type of activity.

Tuesday's brief discussion by council in caucus appeared to be a complete reversal of opinion on the part of several aldermen, members of the roads committee who last week recommended rejection of a restaurant's request to serve refreshments at outdoor tables on the mall.

At that time most committee members felt that granting the application would set an unfortunate precedent for other mall-fronting businesses to extend their trade on the sidewalk, resulting in a cluttered-up appearance.

Nothing was said about the particular request from Brand's Restaurant, 1009 Government, being unsuitable, or about establishing a general policy. The recommendation was for straight rejection, period.

But on Tuesday Ald. Bob Ellis reopened discussion by saying he believed Brand's proposal was turned down "not on principle," but because of the individual circumstances.

Wright said that in an informal luncheon discussion following last week's committee meeting, several aldermen agreed that "some activity on the mall was a good idea."

Ald. Alf Hood, one of the most outspoken opponents of the plan last week, said Ald. Bob Wright was in the process of drawing up guidelines for various activities on the mall, including the aspect of outdoor restaurants.

Wright told council that in due course he would bring forward his recommendations, including "the type of thing Brand's want to have."

"We want to be sure our homework is done properly so we can be proud of what is going in there, rather than end up with a hotch-potch," he added.

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

More than 80 schools from Duncan to Nanaimo were closed today by two separate strikes which halted classes for almost 20,000 students.

Janitors, bus drivers and custodians, represented by the International Woodworkers of America in the Duncan school district set up picket lines around the district's 38 schools this morning, closing facilities completely until at least Friday.

In Nanaimo, striking non-teaching school board employees posted pickets around the schools today for the first time since their strike began April 5.

Virtually all of the district's 660 teachers respected the picket lines, leaving students and school board supervisory personnel in "utter confusion," a board spokesman said.

Until today, the Nanaimo area's 43 schools had been open for students to pick up and hand in assignments to teachers, although classes were cancelled.

Joy Leach, a spokesman for the 228 members of the school board local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the school pickets were posted this morning to protest the employer's "stalling tactics."

She said the local appreciated the "tremendous support" of the teachers.

The picket lines were respected by nearly all of the 660 teachers affected by the dispute.

A spokesman for Nanaimo District Teachers Association said only a few teachers had crossed picket lines this morning. Most of the rest attended "in-service sessions" at four designated meeting places.

They were to discuss their position and later today were expected to continue in groups to work on professional development.

The same procedure was likely to be taken again Thursday, the spokesman said.

James Thorpe, Nanaimo school board treasurer, said today no further negotiation meetings are scheduled although "management is ready and willing at any time."

He said negotiations are now in the mediation stage and the next meeting is at the call of mediator Clark Gilmore. It is not at the call of management, "something the union chooses to ignore," Thorpe said.

He said most schools were in a state of confusion because of the picket's appearance early this morning.

In Duncan, teachers have received permission from the IWA to cross picket lines and go to the schools.

Teachers are required to report for work even though the schools are closed until Friday. A board spokesman said the schools will be open for one hour on Friday.

The CUPE local in the Duncan area schools, representing clerical staff, is respecting the picket lines.

IWA president Roger Stanyer said today no negotiations are scheduled.

The union is asking for an increase to $6.50 an hour on the minimum rate of $5.65 an hour. The board has offered $6.10 an hour.

"Naturally management would prefer spending money on more workers instead of on overtime and fewer workers," Davis said.

The minister said people working on the ferries are paid a "fantastic" rate, averaging about $15,000 a year.

"Naturally management would prefer spending money on more workers instead of on overtime and fewer workers," Davis said.

Management and the union are meeting today in an attempt to work out what will happen to the 450 people when the jobs are eliminated.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said he was aware of the issue was for discussion between union and management, he said.

"We want employees to snitch on their employers, to steal documents and bring the waste to our attention. We want to stamp out waste wherever it exists and it exists in the private sector as much as in the public sector. And like the other Max we won't need facts," he said.

The charges involve conspiracy to give and receive a benefit and with conferring a benefit on an official of the government.

The RCMP swore informations against the five before a justice of the peace here Tuesday night.

Besides Campbell and the senator, the three former Sky Shops officers referred to in the informations are chairman Louis Lapointe, Montreal; vice-president Gordon G. Brown, Freeport, Bahamas, and treasurer James Lahey of Toronto.

The charges can a year-long police investigation into alleged "influence peddling" in the 1972 renewal of Sky Shops Export Ltd.'s leases to operate duty free shops at two major Quebec airports.

RCMP said all five were expected to appear for arraignment on the charges later this week and it was unlikely the arrest warrants would have to be served.

The charges each carry a penalty of up to five years in prison.

The documents allege that Campbell and three other former officers of Sky-Shops Export Ltd. gave the senator $95,000 in 1972 to gain a lease extension to 1980 for the company's duty-free shop at Dorval Airport.

Named in the information sworn before a justice of the peace but not charged was Carmel Carriere, who was executive assistant to Jean Marchand in 1972 when the federal transport department reversed itself and granted the lease extension. Until then, department officials had told

Ford Given Tax Refund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, after paying 42 per cent of his 1975 income in taxes, has received a federal income tax refund of $11,631.

The White House released the figures Tuesday showing that Ford's 1975 gross income was $251,991. His federal taxes were $94,568 and his state and local taxes $11,941.

Ford got the refund as a result of having $106,200 withheld during the year from his pay cheque. However, press secretary Ron Nessen said the amounts withheld for local taxes and Michigan taxes were short by "several hundred dollars."

Ford's $251,991 gross income included $200,000 in salary, $50,000 in presidential expenses, and $1,991 in earnings from renting property, savings account interest and stock dividends.

Nessen said Ford didn't have to pay taxes on $23,000 he listed as business expenses, primarily from the cost of buying and mailing Christmas cards, but paid taxes on the remaining $27,000 of his expense fund.

Ford's taxable income was figured at $204,605.

HUBERT BEST

CHENEY, Wash. (UPI) — "The hands that picked cotton in 1966 will choose the president in 1976," says Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Jackson, president of Chicago's Operation Breadbasket food program for the poor, told an audience at Eastern Washington State College Tuesday that Blacks will choose the next president and he will be Hubert Humphrey.

Blacks could support Humphrey because "he paid his dues," said Jackson.

Washington Post

PHILADELPHIA — Virtually the entire labor establishment in this industrial and heavily unionized state came out Tuesday in support of Sen. Henry Jackson — and thus in opposition to former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter — in next Tuesday's Democratic presidential primary.

The labor-for-Jackson committee has the blessing of I. W. Abel, president of the powerful Steelworkers Union, who sent a telephone message that was read by a regional officer labor governor," said James Mahoney, executive vice-president of the state AFL-CIO and a leading member of the labor-for-Jackson group.

"Carter has not been a friend to labor."

The labor-for-Jackson committee has the blessing of I. W. Abel, president of the powerful Steelworkers Union, who sent a telephone message that was read by a regional officer of the union at a news conference Tuesday evening.

The message was: "He stands behind you 100 per cent," the regional officer, Hugh Carella, said to Jackson.

The labor leaders vigorously denied they were backing Jackson and trying to stop Carter with the ultimate aim of winning the Democratic nomination for Sen. Hubert

Humphrey. The Pennsylvania labor chieftains have long been warm friends of Humphrey but Mahoney said at the news conference, "Nobody is more qualified than Sen. Jackson."

But confident Carter has launched an all-out drive to win the state's primary, a test he says may offer his opponents "their last chance to stop me" from nailing down the nomination.

Bolstered by an infusion of campaign funds and a successful 24-hour swing through Louisiana and Texas, Carter came here Tuesday afternoon expressing confidence he is ahead in the Pennsylvania popularity poll.

While conceding "our support is soft," he said he hopes to use the next seven days to baffle what he called "tight-knit" effort by backers of active rivals Jackson and Norris Udall and his undeclared challenger, Humphrey, to stop him here.

Except for brief fund-raising tries to Tennessee on Friday and Connecticut on Monday, Carter will spend all his working hours in the next week in Pennsylvania.

In aiming for a knockout over Jackson and Udall impressive enough to slow Humphrey's increasingly public move toward an active candidacy, Carter is taking a calculated risk.

He will spend only one more day in Texas and none in Louisiana, even though the 171 delegates to be chosen in those two states are only seven fewer than the bloc available in Pennsylvania.

Quake For L.A. 'In Year'

PASADENA (UPI) — State disaster officials today studied a forecast by a seismologist, using newly developed earthquake prediction techniques, that a major earthquake may strike the Los Angeles area "within a year."

Dr. James H. Whitcomb of Caltech said Tuesday that seismological readings indicate "an earthquake somewhere between magnitude 5.5 and 6.5 (on the Richter scale) may occur within a year with an epicenter near that of the 1971 San Fernando tremor."

That quake, centred in the northern suburbs of Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley, registered 6.5 and killed 65 persons, doing $500 million damage.

Whitcomb said pinpointing the time and epicenter of the quake is impossible, given the current state of the infant science of earthquake prediction. But he said the readings apply to an irregular circle of 83 square miles that covers most of the Los Angeles area, from Santa Monica Bay to the Mojave desert and south through Hollywood, Beverly Hills and the central part of the city.

The affected area has a population of more than 6 million.

There are at least 20 active earthquake faults in the zone, Whitcomb said, and the quake could occur along any of them. The faults are connected to the San Andreas fault, a division in the earth's crust that splits California from the Mexican border to the point north of San Francisco where it runs out to sea, and is the source of most of the state's destructive temblors.

Whitcomb's report was submitted to the California earthquake prediction evaluation council, which advises the state office of emergency准备. Emergency preparedness director Charles Newland said nothing more can be said until members of the council which will meet in mid-May, "conclude their studies."

Whitcomb's prediction was submitted to the California earthquake prediction evaluation council, which advises the state office of emergency preparedness. Emergency preparedness director Charles Newland said nothing more can be said until members of the council which will meet in mid-May, "conclude their studies."

Four Killed

HIGH RIVER, Alta. (UPI) — Four persons were killed Tuesday in a two-vehicle collision about six miles south of here. The accident occurred when the driver of a three-quarter-ton truck, pulling a trailer, stopped to change a flat tire. A passing car smashed into the trailer, killing the man changing the tire and three persons in the car.

Depot's Fate Left To Budget Session

The Borden Street recycling depot will have to wait for Saanich council's budget session next week to know whether the municipality will give it financial help.

About 20 supporters, many from outside Saanich, attended Monday's council meeting to ask council to reduce the depot's annual rent from $12,000 to $1,000 because of the Capital Regional District's decision to cut the depot's proposed budget of $60,000 by 25 per cent.

The rent paid Saanich is used to repair the building.

Lum told council that Saanich has done more than its share to keep the depot operating, renting the building for $1 a year in the initial years to encourage its survival.

"Everybody on this council agrees that recycling is a good thing . . . but at a cost to whom?" he asked depot coordinator Donald Sher and his supporters.

Lum said the provincial factory inspector insists that certain repairs be done.

Land commissioner Frank Harris said: "There is urgent work to be done — first, the remainder of the roof, secondly, the repair of two sky-lights. The factory inspector says some source of heat must be supplied for the building — and the completion of illumination for the outside of the building."

Harris estimated a minimum of $9,000 must be spent on the building this year.

Ald. Joe Bourque deplored the "somewhat indifferent" attitude of the regional board in slashing the depot's budget and urged Saanich to subsidize the depot for at least the remainder of the year. He said it would cost "a devil of a lot of money" to bring the building up to standard if it was rented out for commercial use.

"We have had offers (for commercial use) of $20,000 a year from people who are willing to undertake renovations at no cost to the municipality," Lum replied.

Ald. Fred Severson, one of Saanich's three representatives on the regional board, told Sher and his supporters that the Saanich representatives had voted in favor of retaining the depot while many others on the board had wanted it closed.

He said he knew that people as far north as the Malahat used the depot.

Johnson said the depots users and supporters should "put their money where their mouth is and provide support from outside (the municipality)."

Ald. David Paterson said the depot should work on getting additional funds from outlying areas but that Saanich should help "one more year to help them through their time of need."

On the suggestion of Lum, council will decide at its budget session whether to reduce the depot's rent when it considers intermunicipal and other grants.

Lum said 50 per cent of the
